Commission meets

(c) New York Times

Philadelphia — Rosalynn Carter, presiding at the first public hearing of the President's Commission on Mental Health, said Tuesday that she generally was opposed to placing mentally ill persons in institutions.

The President's wife, designated honorary chairman of the commission after it was established in February, also asserted that the commission was not a public relations operation and that it would "come up with something to give Jimmy" by September.

Higher meat prices seen

Washington (UPI) — The price of beef could go up 7 cents a pound and pork could rise as much as 15 cents a pound if the government bans certain antibiotics in animal feed, a spokesman for American Cyanamid Co. said Tuesday.

The Food and Drug Administration said "the economic effect will be nowhere near that figure."

Ford slams Carter proposal

Washington (AP) — "President Carter's suggestion that general tax revenues might be needed for the Social Security system is 'one of the most dangerous and short-sighted policies I can imagine,'" former President Gerald R. Ford said Tuesday.

"If this proposal is enacted — if we abandon the policy of a self-sustaining trust fund now — the next generation of older Americans may not have a Social Security program to count on for their retirement years," Ford told the Invest in America luncheon.

Maine senate muffles bill

Augusta, Maine (AP) — A bill designed to draw attention to the state's winter sports was defeated in the senate after a member said it had already brought the state enough attention.

The proposal would have proclaimed the first day of winter a holiday in honor of Chester Greenwood, who invented the earmuff 100 years ago because he had cold ears.

The senate rejected the measure 16-13 but the house, which already approved the bill, could force another vote, legislators said.

Lifetime job in accord

(c) New York Times

New York — United Steelworkers has taken the longest step yet of any basic union toward lifetime job security. The new pact covering 30,000 aluminum workers goes well beyond last month's agreement in basic steel.

It provides for income guarantees of 95% in a phased program that will cover workers with as little as 2 years' seniority. The accord gives 90% protection limited to 20-year workers.

French limp through strike

Paris (AP) — France limped through its first general strike in nine years Tuesday, but the stock market rallied and only minor incidents were reported.

Strikers law struck down

New York (AP) — New York State's 40-year-old law providing unemployment pay for strikers was ruled unconstitutional Tuesday by a federal judge who said it encouraged and prolonged industrial walkouts.

In addition, Judge Richard Owen held that the $95 a week in unemployment insurance put employers in the position of financing strikes against themselves and threatened the heart of the collective bargaining system.

Senate farm bill busts budget

Washington (AP) — The Senate passed a major farm bill Tuesday with crop subsidies nearly twice as high as the Carter administration recommended. Administration officials have warned that President Carter may veto the bill.

The price support levels also exceed a 10-day-old spending target established by Congress.

The bill was passed 69 to 18 and sent to the House.

Both of Nebraska's senators, Democrat Edward Zornsky and Republican Carl Curtis, voted for the bill.

Before passing the bill, the Senate defeated attempts to reduce the crop target prices in line with the budget resolution recently passed by both the Senate and House.

"If the budget process is worth anything it means this bill cannot be approved as it is written," said Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, in an impassioned plea to his fellow senators.

Muskie, chairman of the Budget Committee, lost 50 to 45 on one amendment to reduce the bill's pricetag and 51 to 43 on a second. The first amendment would have reduced wheat target prices from $2.90 for the first year covered by the bill to $2.65. The second amendment would have reduced the target prices for wheat and corn for the remaining four years of the bill.

Farm state senators argued vigorously against the Muskie amendments, saying they would single out farmers for sacrifices.

Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., said "Why hang the wheat farmer just because of some budgetary restraints? The bill is already too low in wheat price supports."

Muskie's position is similar to that taken by President Carter who has said the bill's $4 billion average in supports for major crops for a five-year period is twice the level he will accept.

"If we are to balance the budget early in the next decade, as the Carter administration has proposed, then we must face up to the fact that this bill would go against that goal," Muskie said.

"Now is not the time to approve spending not contemplated in either the President's budget or in the congressional budget resolution. If we do so for agriculture, then we will be pressured to do so for other programs," he said.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the administration's present position goes against that taken by candidate Jimmy Carter last fall. "Carter promised a decent price for farm products. Appearing in Kansas last October, Vice President Mondale called for a $3 minimum price support for wheat," Dole said.

Pending legislation in the House would set the support level for wheat, feed grains, cotton rice and soybeans at about $2.3 billion per year over the five-year period. Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, has hinted that compromises might be made between the House and Senate on the bill.

The Senate bill also would extend the food stamp program for two years.

The Senate rejected 64 to 31 a proposal by Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., to delete the administration-backed provision to eliminate the purchase requirement for food stamps.

Talmadge supported the amendment. "It changes the program to an outright welfare program. If we continue to provide free gimmicks to people who don't work we'll never have any welfare reform."

Dole argued against the Curtis amendment. "There are many federal programs where you don't have to put up any money to get the benefits. Why does this make the food stamp program a welfare program?"

The Senate also defeated 57-37 another Curtis proposal to require identification cards for food stamp recipients. Curtis said the amendment would reduce fraud in the program, but opponents said the bill already calls for such a program to be tested in some areas.

An amendment by Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., to deny food stamps to strikers was tabled by 56-38 vote. Melcher offered the successful motion to table the amendment. He said nutritional aid should not be denied any family that qualified under food stamp requirements.

Baby Kevin lucky to be alive at all

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — "The bullet went in here," the doctor said, pointing to a scar on baby Kevin's lower right back. "And it came out here," she continued, pointing to another scar on his right chest.

Year-old Kevin Ruffin Holcomb squeaked a mild protest as Dr. Gayle Kates showed him off to a roomful of doctors, nurses, photographers and newsmen at the University of Illinois Hospital.

The doubly happy occasion was a celebration of Kevin's first birthday and the fact that he was alive at all.

A year ago Monday, Mrs. Denise Holcomb — nearly nine months pregnant — was rushed to the hospital after being shot through the abdomen in a street holdup. Kevin, who was delivered that day by Caesarean section, was hit by the same 38-caliber bullet.

The bullet tore through his liver, colon, kidney, diaphragm and right arm. Doctors compared the effect of the slug smacking into his 3-pound 12-ounce body to that of a bullet the size of a baseball hitting an adult.

But after surgery on his second day of life outside the womb and surgery again at 4 months, Kevin pulled through. Dr. Kates said Kevin should have no long-term health problems because of his wounds.

Mrs. Holcomb took Kevin in for a checkup Monday. With her were her other children, Lisa, 8, Dawn, 6, Helen, 5, and Barnett, 4. Kevin and Barnett — also celebrating a birthday — both got presents from the hospital staff.

"Do his brothers and sisters treat him like just another ordinary 1-year-old?" a newsmen asked.

"Why he is just an ordinary 1-year-old," Mrs. Holcomb said, obviously pleased that Kevin will have the same chances as any other child his age.

Mrs. Holcomb, 24, was shot when she and other relatives went to the aid of an uncle who was being robbed near her South Side home.

Larry Bone, 26, was charged with shooting her. The charges are pending.

A charge of attempted murder of Kevin also was filed at the time but later was dismissed by Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham.

Adams farmer risks 'no' vote on tax exemption bill

By Don Walton

Star Staff Writer

Sen. George "Bill" Burrows knew he was risking his political future Tuesday.

Burrows was the only rural senator voting in the unicameral against enactment of a bill which increases property tax exemptions for agriculture and business.

The bill, LB518, cleared its last test on a 30-10 vote. (See story on Page 49).

Six Omaha senators voted against it. Three Lincoln senators voted against it. And a farmer from Adams named Bill Burrows voted against it.

In preparation for that vote, Burrows earlier sent his first mass mailing to rural constituents in Gage and Jefferson Counties.

Over a thousand letters explaining his position were mailed to Gage County rural households alone. And they triggered not a single return letter asking him to vote for the bill, Burrows said.

It is the freshman senator's contention that LB518 will be bad in the long run for farmers despite the strong support it has received from farm organizations and lobbyists.

Burrows has what he believes is the real answer for tax relief for farmers in the form of his bill, LB192, which would totally replace property tax funding of schools with income tax support.

"That's what I told them in the letters, and the only replies which I have received express support for my bill," he noted.

Burrows believes farmers are buying limited tax relief on agricultural equipment and inventories now at the expense of higher real estate taxes later when they support LB518.

"The regressive elements of that bill outweigh the advantages," he said.

While providing total property tax exemptions for farm equipment and inventories, including livestock, over a three-year period the bill places a $70 million ceiling on the amount of state sales and income tax revenue which will be tapped to replace lost local property tax revenue.

By the third year the exemption is in effect, Burrows said, local government is going to find itself about $31 million short in terms of replacement money. That figure is likely to rise to $40 million to $50 million by the fourth or fifth year, he said.

Then local government will need to turn to real estate taxes to provide the replacement money, Burrows said.

"After four or five years, I believe farmers will be paying more total property taxes as a result of LB518," he said.

The real beneficiaries of the bill will be big business interests with large inventories, Burrows said.

And those interests will "probably work actively for my defeat" next year through the Beatrice Chamber of Commerce, the senator said.

Although he isn't certain yet, Burrows said he will probably seek a second legislative term.

By then he hopes to have made his position on property tax relief clear to the voters of his district, particularly his rural neighbors who share with him the burden of personal property taxes on farm equipment and inventories.

"Yeah, it's a political risk," Burrows acknowledged. "But I think I can explain my actions to farmers."

Taxpayers may be owed refund

If you paid 1973 real or personal property taxes on property with an actual value of at least $5,750 you probably have a refund due you.

Lancaster County Treasurer Frank Golden urges Lancaster County taxpayers to claim their respective refunds by the June 30 deadline.

He said taxpayers may either come in to his office in the County-City Building, call in or send in by mail the legal description of the property and their name and address for each piece of property on which they paid.

1973 taxes and for which they may be entitled to a refund.

The refunds stem from a 1974 Nebraska Supreme Court ruling which ruled unconstitutional the one-mill levy on property which furnished about 30% of the community colleges' revenue.

A bill passed by the 1976 Legislature paved the way for making the refunds.

According to Golden, approximately $400,000 is due Lancaster County taxpayers in refunds which on an individual basis will be relatively small.

For example, the owner of a home valued at $30,000 in 1973 with an assessed valuation of $10,500 for tax purposes would be entitled to a $10.50 refund for the one mill tax collected for technical college support.

Only refunds of $2.00 or more will be made, and, according to Golden's office, if a taxpayer paid his 1973 taxes after August 1974, he may not have paid the illegal tax and therefore would not be entitled to a refund.

However, Golden urges all who have any question as to whether they are entitled to the refund to contact his office.

He said taxpayers may be entitled to a refund if they paid taxes on property which was not actually owned by them.

Grand Island slaying makes the heart ache

Crimes such as the senseless murder of Grand Island businessman Donald Beery Jr. leave one with an aching heart. How utterly terrible it was that this young man's life was snuffed out through such violence. What a hard thing it would be for his family and friends to bear.

A few days later, it was time to think of the consequences and they, too, are most disheartening. Two young boys from Grand Island have been charged with the murder of Beery.

Here again is the prospect of more wasted life. If convicted, these two young men will have seen their lives ended, for all practical purposes, before they have even reached their 21st birthdays.

We make no effort to judge them here or to add any prejudice to their case.

Carpool a boondoggle

The Lincoln Carpool/Vanpool office is one of the larger pies in the sky we have come across in some time. Headed in news stories as a potential money-maker for the people, it is one of those ideas whose time never has and never will come.

The idea of this new city agency is to get together people with an interest in getting into a carpool. It is like a child, often well meant but often short on reality.

People who want to form a carpool, we guess, will find a way of doing so. The city agency may promote a few pools that might or might not otherwise get off the ground but its real impact will be zilch.

Are crooks on council?

Is there a bunch of crooks on the City Council? One might think something close to that when seeing one of the first orders of business for the new governing body. That first order of business was a spat and proposal concerning conflicts of interest.

Council President Dick Baker has created a five-member group to study the matter of conflicts of interest and make a report to the council in two weeks. The idea as we understand it is to clarify the matter so that council members can proceed in an orderly and legal manner.

All of which is maybe all right but we hope the new council is not setting the stage for an ongoing battle along the conflict-of-interest lines. Maybe, too, it is time for the legislative group to forget about conflicts and get on with the business of the city.

Both new councilmen, Joe Hampton and Leo Scherer, have business interests which will present them from time to time with a possible conflict of interest. But both are honorable men and quite capable of distinguishing between theirs and the city's interests.

We would prefer that the council let

Sweden's woes worsen

Stockholm — Strikes and the threat of strikes on a massive scale hang over an economy plagued by inflation and the peril of unemployment. This is all very new to a nation that has so long boasted of a high standard of living closely paralleling that of the United States.

Last fall a coalition of three right-of-center parties, Center, Moderate and Liberal, defeated the Social Democrats who had dominated the government almost continuously for 44 years.

The coalition had the bad luck to inherit double-digit inflation and high labor costs. This made it difficult if not impossible to sell in world markets still suffering from recession.

For a country whose industry depends up to 50% or more on exports, it presented the new government with a painful dilemma. Labor costs, plus fringe benefits, had risen by 45% in two years beginning in 1974. Compare this with a rise of 11% in West Germany.

The new government, faced with sales resistance in the economic slowdown, concluded it had no choice but to follow the policy of the Social Democrats. That was to subsidize industry in order to keep workers on the payroll and production up to past levels.

To have done otherwise would have meant substantial unemployment, intolerable for a government that had just come into office by a narrow margin.

But what to do with the output of plants continuing to produce at the old pace? It was to be stored as inventory to be sold, once Sweden's customers began to revive.

As a result large stores of the high-grade products Swedish industry has long been proud of are held off the market with storage increasingly becoming a problem.

On the docks at the Port of Gothenburg are 15,000 Volvos. In America the Volvo is priced at $10,000, which puts it somewhat under a Cadillac. This makes for tough competition in the foreign-car field with low-cost Japanese cars at one end of the scale and deluxe Mercedes-Benz from Germany at the top of the high-cost spectrum. Volvo has just merged with SAAB, the other Swedish car manufacturer, to cut down overhead costs.

Wood pulp and paper have long been one of Sweden's principal exports. By one esbut life without freedom is certainly over for whoever is finally found guilty of the crime. In a few thoughtless moments, some one or more persons took the life of Mr. Beery and thereby placed their own in jeopardy.

What a tragedy! It's the thing that makes such acts so incomprehensible.

How can one human being kill another, knowing the moral outrage that it is and the consequences thereof? What possible motive would ever make it worthwhile?

There are, of course, no answers to those questions. The situation simply demonstrates the fact that mankind has not yet found the answer to all the potential violence that exists in society. One simply shakes his head in disbelief at all aspect of such a crime.

Castro dips his toes in 'American lake'

By Richard C. Schroeder
ERR Staff Writer

Washington — The United States appears firmly committed to normalizing its relations with Cuba. American newsmen and business executives are swarming over the island. It has been visited by members of Congress, and the first cruise ship full of tourists recently left for Havana. Last month, the United States sent a high-level diplomatic mission to Cuba for the first time since relations were taken in January, 1961.

Even though Congress has refused to lift the embargo on trade with Cuba, the American business community buzzes with rumors of impending sales of food, medicine and even industrial goods to the island. Also rumored is a limited exchange of diplomatic representation.

In its drive to wipe out 17 years of American-Cuban bitterness, acrimony and distrust, the Carter administration seems willing to brush aside a series of formidable obstacles to the improvement of relations between the two countries. These include opposition by conservatives in the United States, unsettled claims for Cuba's seizure of American property, Cuba's questionable ability to pay for American imports, and the mercurial temperament of Cuba's leader, Fidel Castro.

None of these barriers is insurmountable, although none will be easily overcome. A far more serious question is the expansion of Cuban influence in Africa and the Caribbean, and the extent to which Castro's expansionism poses a challenge to U.S. strategic, political and economic interests.

There are still thousands of Cubans in Angola, including a division or two of Cuban troops helping fight anti-government guerrilla forces. Several thousand more Cuban advisers and technicians are in Mozambique, Zaire, Sierra Leone, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Equatorial Guinea, Tanzania, Somalia, Uganda, Samoa and Ethiopia. Cuba and the Soviet Union have shown no signs of backing off from support of black liberation guerrilla fighters in southern Africa, despite pleas from the United States and moderate African leaders for a peaceful transition to majority rule.

Closer to home, Castro is challenging the old adage that the Caribbean is an "American lake." Havana has forged close ties with Jamaica and Guyana and is backing Panama in its dispute with the United States over control of the Panama Canal. There is also strong evidence of Cuban penetration of such soon-to-be-independent mini-states as Dominica, St. Kitts-Nevis, Antigua and St. Vincent.

There is little indication that the United States has made any strong effort to counter Cuba's Caribbean thrust. Washington, stung by charges it is trying to "destabilize" the left-leaning governments of Michael Manley in Jamaica and Forbes Burnham in Guyana, is reluctant to make any overt move.

Privately, however, U.S. officials are concerned about Cuba's sudden rise to prominence and respectability in the Caribbean. They worry that delente between Washington and Havana may reinforce Castro's image as a leader of the Third World against the forces of "colonialism" and "imperialism."

Rosalynn Carter's first stop on her coming tour of Latin America will be Jamaica, on May 30. The White House has said that Mrs. Carter will engage in "substantive" talks with government leaders on U.S. relations with Latin America and the Caribbean.

Beyond the First Lady's personalized diplomacy, the United States appears at a loss as to how to deal with the Caribbean, a volatile, poverty-stricken region, with all the potential for unrest and strife of Angola or Vietnam. Policy-makers have talked of an international, co-operative development effort to lift the islands out of their current stagnation. They have given encouragement to the formation of a viable Caribbean economic community, and have offered some improvement in the terms of U.S.-Caribbean trade.

But there is no evidence that this country understands the depth of Caribbean economic and social problems, nor the enormous, crippling psychological legacy of the region's neglected colonial past. By default, Fidel Castro is posing as the premier statesman of the Caribbean. The result is likely to be that the Cuban economic and political model will be followed by the dozen or more emerging mini-states that are southeastward from American shores.

Driver resents safety emphasis on helmets

Helmets no cure-all

Seward, Neb. — I found The Star's picture, "The faces of grief," on Wednesday, May 18, very distressing. Especially the comment about the riders being "without helmets."

It is biased comments like that which cause a popular non-rider opinion that motorcycles are dangerous and that helmets are a cure-all. Anyone who has done much riding knows that is bunk.

I very seldom see a comment as to whether a motorist was wearing a seat belt or not in a fatal crash.

I hope I never see biased journalism like that again in a paper.

Competency Testing

Lincoln, Neb. — The warning of Lincoln School Board President Pearl Goldenstein is well taken when she says that the "minimum" in minimum competencies tests might be taken as maximums. Jack Ernst should not misinterpret or assume implications of my remarks on competency testing. I did not say "that all high-school graduates should be judged by the same standards" — nor did I imply any lessening of individualization of school programs or that teachers are not accountable without the use of competency tests.

I did wish to imply that there are common bodies of knowledge and skills that need to be transmitted to all citizens so that they might effectively function in everyday living. There are economic illiterates in our society. There are political illiterates. There are social illiterates. If minimum competency testing could have caught these people at early ages, the schools could have provided the necessary programming that would have permitted them to live richer and fuller lives. The end product would be further individualization, not standardization in our instructional programs. What minimum competency testing might offer us is a handle on the elimination of learning and social inequalities.

Mr. Ernst speaks about the need to have different standards for different ability groups. Until recently, such endeavors have resulted more frequently than not in an excuse for school systems to bus their public obligations in favor of selected social groups. As modern examples, look to South Africa or Rhodesia. Within this country, we are only at the beginning stages of recognizing that the handicapped have as much right in the regular school program as the non-handicapped. We have sometimes confused the term "ability" with race, religion, and financial stability of the pupil's family. The concept of minimum competency implies equality of learning opportunities, be the student a city dweller or a rural dweller, a resident of an affluent neighborhood or a less affluent neighborhood.

The concept does not imply identical standards for all students, but minimum standards.

As a teacher myself, I favor more formal means of accountability. Mr. Ernst is right to say that teacher competency is always "on the line." And, I agree with him in his desire to keep the administrators out of the picture. But, is teacher competency always on the line for the right reasons? Are not teachers primarily accountable to administrative officers at present? Are the best teachers, that is, the teachers who assist students to reach their fullest potential, always rewarded? I venture to guess that competency testing developed by the professionals in charge of our educational system (the teachers) would help keep our attention focused on student achievement.

Would not competency testing help define more accurately the responsibilities of the teacher, and thus permit fairer judgment of teachers' accomplishments? Yes, I am sure there would be many arguments over what minimum competencies should be limited on the high school diploma. But, would not these arguments help clarify the duties of the teacher and define which student outcomes are in our control and which ones are not within our control?

Would not these arguments also put us in a permanent evaluation of the curriculum, a positive step, in my judgment, considering the changing life skills of our society?

for five years to save dolphins from needless deaths in the tuna nets. However, they are in more trouble than ever, so kids everywhere need to help.

Next week Congress will be voting on an amendment by Rep. Murphy of New York, new chairman of the House Committee on Fisheries, to the Marine Mammal Act, which would allow the tuna industry to kill 78,000 dolphins in 1977.

The tuna industry is refusing to sail under present conditions allowing a kill of 59,050 dolphins. The fishermen are blaming dolphin lovers for their economic plight.

However, had the tuna fishers followed one simple regulation — that of stationary small boats with men at the far end of the net to prevent net roll-up — they would have spared 40,000 dolphins last year.

In a sample of 29 ships, it was found that three ships had caused 40% of the kill. Why don't the "good guys" in the industry make the "bad guys" measure up to those standards of skill that for four years the fleet has been claiming has "just about solved the problem?"

Rush letters to Rep. John M. Murphy of New York, new chairman of the House Committee on Fisheries, and your own congressmen in Washington D.C. Remind President Carter of his campaign pledge to protect on student achievement.

Dolphins lead fishermen to "light" tuna and are suffocated in the nets spread about both of them. Like us, dolphins need air to breathe, and have their young one at a time. More are being killed than are born each year.

God gave this intelligent friend of man a permanent smile. Let's help him keep it.

Urges caution

Lincoln, Neb. — Nebraska has started out in 1977 with a poor record on our highways, which seems to be getting worse with the news on May 25 reporting nine deaths for the weekend.

Just a few years ago we had demonstrations because our youth were dying overseas, but nobody seems to care that this country annually loses thousands of our young people on the highways, not to mention the thousands left maimed for life.

One wonders where the fault lies. Only so much can be done by education, legislation and highway engineering. It is the driver who must take responsibility for both the lives in his care and his own. A little more courtesy, a moment to obey traffic laws, using seat belts and of course sobriety. It has been proven that alcohol is the big killer on our streets and highways, so how often do we tempt fate?

Accidents cost everyone. Some in death and injury, great heartaches to others, and to one and all, higher insurance premiums. Every accident costs taxpayers for the necessary personnel at the scene.

With the summer months and extra trips being made, we urge citizens to take just a little more care. Life is more precious than time. It is still true: "The life you save may be your own."

Double standards?

Lincoln, Neb. — The gross, gross, gross corruption of the Republican Party and Richard Nixon is documented in "Nightmare" by the Pulitzer Prize-winning author and journalist, J. Anthony Lukas. I quote: "In 1972 the White House helped to form a new organization called the Federation of Experienced Americans which was largely designed to mobilize the elderly for Nixon's re-election. Within months, the new group got a $1,540,000 grant from the Labor Department and $392,829 from OEO. Meanwhile, the White House brought heavy pressure on the Labor Department to cease funding two other organizations for the elderly — the National Council on the Aging and the National Council of Senior Citizens — which were regarded as 'enemies' of the President. They continued to get grants but their funding was substantially reduced."

Being a member of a party as this, it seems that Congressman Thone exhibits dual standards of responsibility for Democrats vis-a-vis Republicans. It is "Sharley's" opinion that the laboratory was improperly relocated in St.

Ghost town?

Lincoln, Neb. — Adding insult to injury, city planners consider "eventual closing of O Street at a later date."

I am thinking of the $1.9 million to rip up O Street, repave, plant trees and flowers, etc. to bring shoppers back to our downtown shops. Instead these stores are being boxed in, discouraging shoppers because of long walks from bus or parking lots. Instead of being helpful, the city planners are burying these main stores by their street dressing up. Are businessmen going to sit still for their burial, for skywalks, kiosks which are eyesores, and other new nightmares?

Personnel along this supposed improvement and public drivers are aware of loss of business downtown and doubtful of any rebirth. So is our beloved Lincoln going to become a ghost town because of misguided progress, as did the old West long ago?

'Hot Thumb' wins again

Washington (UPI) — Rep. Bill "Hot Thumb" Burlison, a Missouri Democrat and agate thumper, retained his congressional marbles championship Tuesday with an embarrassingly easy 4-1 victory over Rep. Bill Alexander, Arkansas Demo-rat.

Burlison, defending the crown he won in the first such event last year, received a $1,000 scholarship, which he will award to a institution to be named later.

In his victory statement, Burlison expressed hope the tournament would encourage youngsters to take up marbles and not spend so much time watching television.

The tournament was sponsored by a children's television program.

Oklahoma governor to fight inmate reduction

Oklahoma City (AP) — After a judge ordered Oklahoma Tuesday to cut the population at its two major prisons by about 1,000, Gov. David Boren attacked the ruling and promised to seek to overturn it by appeal to higher courts.

Boren said the state's appeal would go as high as the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary. U.S. District Judge Luther Bohanon ruled that overcrowded conditions at the two prisons constituted cruel and unusual punishment.

Ruling at the end of a two-day hearing, Bohanon directed that the population of the main maximum security prison at McAlester be cut from 1,561 inmates to 800 and that the population of the Granite Reformatory be reduced from 685 to 450.

Sodium caseinate—vanilla or chocolate?

Washington (AP) — I scream, you scream, we all scream for — sodium caseinate?

The Food And Drug Administration next month will begin allowing ice cream producers to substitute sodium caseinate, a foreign-made mild protein product, for nonfat dry milk in America's favorite frozen dessert. The change in federal regulations is expected to benefit ice cream producers and could save consumers about a nickel a gallon on the ice cream they buy. The United States produces nearly a billion gallons of ice cream a year.

The FDA says its new standards are more lenient than the previous ones adopted in 1964 because they let the industry, rather than the government, make up ice cream recipes.

But dairymen are furious.

The new standards "destroy the integrity of ice cream," says Patrick B. Healy, secretary of the National Milk Producers Federation. "The traditional role of ice cream as a recognized and standardized dairy product and its contribution as a nutritious food is in jeopardy."

The FDA rejects that argument.

The new regulations state that ice cream will still have to contain 2.7 per cent protein, essentially what is required now. But it permits manufacturers to use any "safe and suitable ingredients" to meet that standard.

The old standard wouldn't permit casein, which in food products generally appears as sodium caseinate, to be counted as protein, although it is, by definition, the protein found in milk.

The new standards also permit increased use of whey solids, the high protein products that come from the watery part of milk, to be used to bring ice cream up to the required protein level.

An Agriculture Department expert, John K. Hanes, says consumers probably won't notice the difference in taste or quality unless some makers put too much sodium caseinate in their products.

The milk producers predict that's just what will happen and say competition will force down the quality of all ice cream.

Government and industry sources say dairy farmers oppose the new regulation because cheap, imported sodium caseinate will be used by ice cream makers instead of the more expensive, U.S.-made nonfat dry milk.

Although there was once a substantial casein industry in the United States, when milk was plentiful and it was profitable to reduce skim milk to its dry protein residue, the dairy price support system instituted in 1949 provided no subsidy for casein. The industry quickly died out as manufacturers switched to the production of price-supported nonfat dry milk.

The milk producers predict that's just what will happen and say competition will force down the quality of all ice cream.

Government and industry sources say dairy farmers oppose the new regulation because cheap, imported sodium caseinate will be used by ice cream makers instead of the more expensive, U.S.-made nonfat dry milk.

He's not getting older, just better

Providence, R.I. (UPI) — Elvis Presley and his female fans are growing middle-aged together — and the ladies are as adoring as ever.

Presley doesn't move as much as he did in the 1950s when he hit stardom as "Elvis the Pelvis."

But that didn't bother the 13,500 fans who jammed into the Providence Civic Center Monday night.

Some among those who paid $10 to $15 for their 60 minutes of ecstasy complained Presley had gotten fat. Others said he didn't wiggle enough.

But most loved him.

Decked out in a white jumpsuit covered with gold brocade and slit to the navel, Presley was the target of cameras and binoculars which were passed from seat to seat.

All he had to do was lift his left heel or raise two fingers in the air, and the women jumped to their feet, screaming "Elvis!"

"I've screamed more for him in an hour than I've screamed in a lifetime," said Cathy Kanarian, 28, a Providence housewife.

Screaming was the least of it.

Fans clawed past one another, grabbing souvenir nylon scarves which Presley wiped across his sweaty brow, then flung casually into the audience.

Mrs. Kanarian's 29-year-old husband, Donald, displayed red scratch marks on both arms after he fought through the crowd to retrieve a scarf for his wife's birthday present. "One girl crawled over my back," he said.

South Moluccan terrorists stand firm on demands

Bovenmilde, The Netherlands (AP) — Anguish and helpless fury grew among parents and other townsfolk in this northern Dutch village Tuesday as South Moluccan terrorists held 105 children and six teachers hostage in the village school for a second day.

There was talk of reprisals against other South Moluccans here.

"God help them if they kill any of those poor kids," said taxi driver Pieter Kan. "It will mean civil war around here. The people here are ready to lynch them."

Ten miles away a second group of South Moluccans held 50 to 60 other hostages on a hijacked train standing quietly in the middle of flat green pastureland.

The government said an attempt at mediation would be made, although the gunmen, who were demanding freedom for 21 South Moluccans jailed in the Netherlands, had threatened to shoot hostages if mediators approached.

The militant Asian immigrants — six at the school, seven on the train — set a deadline of 2 p.m. local time (7 a.m. CDT) Wednesday for their demands to be met.

Fourteen of the prisoners are serving sentences for a similar twin terrorist strike in 1975, when they tried to force the Dutch government to help them win independence from Indonesia for their homeland. Indonesia and the South Moluccan islands were once Dutch colonies.

Government officials said the train hijackers seemed more open to negotiation than the group at the school.

"We told the hijackers that if they wanted to achieve anything at all, they would first have to persuade their mates at the school to release the children," said Justice Minister Andries van Agt.

"The hijackers replied they would think very hard and talk among themselves about what we have said. They promised to call back tomorrow morning at the latest."

Van Agt said a "very important South Moluccan" would act as mediator to try and get the children freed.

A Justice Ministry spokesman later identified the mediator as Theo Kuhuwaal, 63, a civil servant in the Education Ministry.

He said Kuhuwaal was flown by helicopter to Bovenmilde to try and open negotiations with the terrorists. Kuhuwaal undertook the mediation effort "at his own risk," an official said.

The Dutch government was silent on whether it intended to give the extremists what they wanted. But after an emergency cabinet meeting Premier Joop den Uyl said the government would not allow hostages to be taken out of the country.

"What we are mainly concerned with is that we must free these people," he said.

The gunmen demanded a jumbo jet to take them, the 21 prisoners and at least some of the hostages out of the country. It was not known where they wanted to be flown.

Justice Ministry spokeswoman Toos Faber said earlier Tuesday there were no negotiations under way at either site, about 90 miles northeast of Amsterdam.

"The terrorists have consistently let us know in the few conversations we have had that they do not wish to negotiate, nor do they want a mediator," she said.

In a list of demands released Tuesday, the South Moluccans warned they would "in no case tolerate mediators. If they nevertheless come, then dead will fall."

The few contacts authorities have had with the terrorists have been made through specially installed telephone links to the train and school.

Gunshots rang out Tuesday morning at the school, where the gunmen also held six teachers, but police said the South Moluccans had only fired into the air to get them to speed up delivery of food.

The extremists fired into the air again several hours later when a woman who authorities said escaped from a mental institution somehow slipped through police lines and reached a bicycle shed next to the school. Two policemen stripped to their undershorts to show they were unarmed, walked to the shed and retrieved the woman.

Porcelain toys break sale record

Mentmore, England (UPI) — Two "milking pails" toys made for Marie-Antoinette of France set world auction records for porcelain Tuesday at the sale of the treasures of Mentmore Towers.

The porcelain pails, made in 1787 and 1788 for the French queen's play at her Let's Pretend Farm at Rambouillet, were bought for $180,650 by an anonymous Englishman.

"That means we have to rewrite the whole record book for porcelain," said a spokesman for Sotheby Parke-Bernet, the auctioneering firm.

The $103,200 paid for one of the pails was both a world record for a single piece of porcelain, and a record for Sevres porcelain. The pails were made in the Sevres factory and decorated to look like wood.

Sudan seeks weapons from United States

Khartoum, The Sudan (UPI) — U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young met Tuesday with President Jaafar Numeiry who asked for sophisticated weapons to "strengthen our relationship with the United States."

Numeiry, who last week expelled 70 Soviet military advisers and ordered the Soviets to reduce their embassy staff, told reporters The Sudan needs sophisticated defense weapons for its outmoded armed forces.

"As a friend to the United States we are hoping to receive some support from the United States," Numeiry said. "I think we are in line to strengthen our relationship with the United States."

Numeiry said he also looked for increased U.S. investment to help turn The Sudan, Africa's biggest country, into a rich food-producing country for the Arab world."

South African student leader is 'banned'

Durban, South Africa (AP) — The South African government has "banned" an official of the all-black South African Students Organization for five years, SASO president Stofle Mongezi said Tuesday.

The government ban restricts the organization's permanent organizer, Silomko Sokupha, to King Williams Town, 300 miles south of this eastern port city and forbids his contact with SASO and several black organizations, including the militant Black People's Convention.

Mongezi described the ban as an intimidation of his organization and part of a plan by the white government to "put away" as many black nationalists as possible before June 16, the first anniversary of the outbreak of rioting in Johannesburg's all-black township of Soweto.

Indians learn political lesson

(c) Chicago Daily News

Chicago — If India learned anything from its 21 months of dictatorial rule under former prime minister Indira Gandhi, it's that an authoritarian system is not necessarily compatible with a developing country.

This is the view of Dr. Ranjhi Kothari, one of India's leading political scientists.

"There are those who believe democracy is unsuitable to developing countries," said Kothari, "But authoritarian systems only exaggerate the power of the elite."

Podgorny out of Politburo

Moscow (AP) — Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny, one of the three most powerful men in the country, was dropped without explanation Tuesday from the ruling council of the Soviet Communist party.

A brief communique over Moscow radio and television did not say if the 74-year-old Podgorny would retain the presidency, a largely ceremonial post, but observers pointed out the position would be virtually impossible to hold without membership in the party's Politburo.

There was also no sign whether Podgorny had retired voluntarily. In other cases, Central Committee communiqes often say a leading figure has left in connection with retirement, ill health or "at his own request."

Tuesday's communique simply said the Communist party's Central Committee had "freed Comrade Podgorny from the duties of a member of the Politburo of the Central Committee of the Communist party of the Soviet Union."

Theoretically, the presidency is bestowed and taken away by the Supreme Soviet, the country's parliament, but its standing executive committee can act without approval from the full house. The Supreme Soviet next meets on June 16.

Podgorny is the first of the three men who overthrew Nikita S. Khrushchev in 1964 to fall by the political wayside. Still in power are Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, 70, viewed as the country's most powerful politician, and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, 73.

Podgorny had recently appeared in robust political and physical health.

He toured black countries in southern Africa in March in a major diplomatic foray by the Kremlin into that area. His name was on Soviet pages as late as Tuesday morning's Pravda, the party newspaper, which carried the text of a diplomatic telegram he sent. His last public appearance was last Friday, when he saw off visiting Finnish President Urho Kekkonen at Moscow airport.

"I thought his progress through Africa was quite triumphant and he has been very active lately," said a Western diplomat here who was as surprised as most by Podgorny's demise as a member of the Politburo.

"It would be difficult to see any outstanding political differences between him and the rest of the Politburo."

No new member was named to the Politburo to take Podgorny's place.

In other organizational changes announced after the Central Committee meeting, Konstantin F. Katushev, 49, a committee secretary dealing with relations among Communist countries, lost his post.

He continues as deputy premier for economic contacts within the Communist bloc.

Konstantin V. Rusakov, 68, an aide to Brezhnev with previous experience in supervising relations with other Communist countries, was named as a new Central Committee secretary, keeping the Western diplomats said Rusakov had been rising in the Kremlin's effective hierarchy for some time, and his promotion to a party secretary was only a formality.

The decision to remove Podgorny from the Politburo was made at a meeting Tuesday of the 250-member Central Committee that controls the Communist party. The Politburo, the party's policy-making body, now has 14 members.

If anything, Tuesday's changes appeared to improve the standing of Brezhnev among the country's top leaders. But Brezhnev's rank, stressed by the heavily publicized celebration of his 70th birthday last Dec. 19, had hardly seemed in need of additional luster.

Podgorny and Kosygin had clearly been background figures in the Soviet hierarchy for several years, receiving virtually none of the public adoration that has been heaped on Brezhnev by other Soviet officials and the controlled news media.

Podgorny, a former sugar plant manager, was 14 during the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution. He was born in Karlovka in the Ukraine but later moved to the Ukrainian capital of Kiev. He became a Communist party member in 1930.

His government career involved the food industry almost exclusively as he rose from the sugar plant to director of a Moscow food institute during World War II.

He later moved into politics with the help of Khrushchev, a fellow Ukrainian, and became chief of the Communist party in Kharkov, the Ukraine, in 1950. He took over Khrushchev's job as party chief of the entire Ukraine in 1957 when Khrushchev became the country's top leader.

Konstantin V. Rusakov, 68, an aide to Brezhnev with previous experience in supervising relations with other Communist countries, was named as a new Central Committee secretary, keeping the

E. Germany seeks better U.S. relations

Washington (AP) — East Germany has proposed settling a number of issues with the United States in hopes of improving relations with Washington, the State Department said Tuesday.

Spokesman Hodding Carter said the East German actions are being studied "carefully" on a systematic basis.

The three major issues involve humanitarian considerations, particularly dealing with family reunification, an agreement on consular locations and the settling of claims against the East Berlin government.

Carter said most of the East German proposals had been made previously, but the newest attempt was set forth as a package and the aspect dealing with reunification of families is considered "a major step" in improving relations.

Carter also indicated that a series of meetings to explore the East German proposals will be held between officials of the two governments.

The spokesman declined to speculate on the reason for the new East German action.

However, another official said the East German initiative apparently was keyed to the convening of a 35-nation conference in Belgrade next month when a review will be held of compliance to the 1975 Helsinki agreement concerning human rights.

U.S. delegation to hit hard on human rights at Belgrade

(c) New York Times
Washington — President Carter will name a high-level U.S. delegation next week to participate in the Belgrade Conference on European Security and Cooperation and will instruct it to hit hard on human rights issues, administration officials said Tuesday.

The American delegation for the East-West conference, which is a sequel to the 1975 Helsinki meeting of 35 governments, will be headed by Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher and will include Rep. Dante B. Fascell, who is chairman of the U.S. Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Idea of monarchy is alive for Louis

Berlin (AP) — The Prince who was born to be Kaiser, Emperor of the Germans, but for whom the scepter of royal rule remains out of reach, said quietly that for him the idea of monarchy is still very much alive.

"You have the best example in Spain," said Prince Louis Ferdinand of Prussia. "Where a very young and intelligent and courageous king, together with some other young political leaders, is performing most remarkably."

Does Louis Ferdinand regret that for him the hour of royal rule never tolled?

"I don't regret that for myself ... I think everybody has to be grateful for what God bestows upon him and has to live life as it is offered."

Apprentice mechanic for Henry Ford, father of seven children, 11 times a grandfather, and descendant of six Hohenzollern kings and three German emperors, Louis Ferdinand emphasized. "I am content to be a private person."

Nonetheless, the Prince said, things could have been different.

"... I firmly believe that without the First World War, Europe, the whole of Europe including Russia, would have developed in another direction."

And had the German monarchy remained after World War I, he added, Hitler never would have come to power.

The Prince, 6-feet-4 inches tall, eyes brown, hair silver, wearing a dark blue suit with a white shirt and blue tie, said in an interview with The Associated Press that he never would accept any thesis that his grandfather, Kaiser Wilhelm II, was responsible for World War I.

"All the states slid into that war," he said. "My grandfather was at the peak of his power. Everything only could become worse (for him) through war."

Then a little boy, Louis Ferdinand said he could not recall any expression of enmity within his family against the czar of Russia and the king of England with whom Germany's ruling house was related, and against whom Germany went to war in 1914.

As for World War II, Louis Ferdinand said, "Hitler produced that war because he had everyone against him ... and because his regime was on the verge of state bankruptcy. He needed a war..."

Louis Ferdinand is the grandson of the last kaiser, son of Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm, putting him in line for the German throne until his grandfather abdicated after World War I on Sept. 1, 1918. He was then 11.

Now almost 70, Louis Ferdinand was interviewed in the comfortable but modest home of his late wife, the Grand Duchess Kira of Russia who died in 1967, which was designed as their permanent residence in West Berlin.

Those around him still call him, "Kaiserliche Hoheit," His Imperial Majesty.

Fluent in French, Spanish and English, a doctor of philosophy trained as an administrator, he said Europe's future lay with a united states of Europe similar to that of the United States.

The mainspring of such a union, he said, should be economic. "I believe that first western Europe will form a sort of federation," he declared. "The individualities, the individual differences of language will remain for a long time. There won't be the integration, the melting pot as it exists in the United States."

There would be room in such a federation, he said, for republics and monarchies side by side.

Louis Ferdinand lived in the United States from 1929 until 1934. For two years he worked on the assembly line at a Ford auto plant in Detroit.

"I stood on the assembly line like everyone else," he recalled. "I enjoyed the experience and I came to know and grow fond of the Americans who stood there with me." Lack of a class consciousness, he added, is the American characteristic he admires most.

For Louis Ferdinand and his family the golden days in Germany in this century were the years just before World War I. "It was by no means a restrictive society," he said. "I think in those days it was much easier to travel from one country to another than it is today ... Nobody needed a passport, there were no customs controls ... My grandfather, for instance, could walk in the (Berlin) Tiergarten followed perhaps by one or two plainclothesmen. That's all. People lived much more safely. Certainly the leaders more so than they do today..."

The Hohenzollerns lost all their extensive property in eastern Germany as the Russian advance in World War II brought Communist annexation and rule.

In 1945, Prince Louis Ferdinand made his way from besieged Berlin westward with the caskets bearing the remains of two of his ancestors, Frederick Wilhelm I, the so-called "Soldier King," and his son, Frederick II, called by history "The Great."

They now are buried in a castle near Stuttgart, the original seat of a dynasty that would rule Germany.

Political posters plaster Madrid

Madrid, Spain (UPI) — Thousands of political party workers Tuesday scrambled out on streets at dawn and plastered Madrid with half a million posters to open campaign for Spain's first free elections in 41 years.

A teen-age Communist Party worker was wounded in the leg by gunshot in one of five attacks against left-wing supporters, the national news agency Cifra reported.

Paloma Garcia, 19, was rushed to hospital after gunmen shot at her from a motorcycle while she was pasting Communist posters at 4 a.m., Cifra said.

"The Crazy Night of the Political Parties," headline of the Diario 16 newspaper described the frenzy that marked the opening of 21-day government-prescribed campaign period.

As a reminder of political violence prevalent in the country in recent weeks, a Basque shot 11 days ago by police died Tuesday.

Gregorio Marichalar, 62, was shot by police during a demonstration supporting a "total amnesty" for political prisoners still in prison. Five other people died in the clashes between police and demonstrators in the Basque region.

The campaign posters that covered the capital's choicest walls appealed for votes in the June 15 election in which Spaniards will choose from some 6,000 candidates running for 557 seats in the two houses of the Cortes (parliament).

Felipe Gonzalez, first secretary of the Socialist Workers, presented the party's platform and drew a line between his Marxist party and the Communist Party of Santiago Carrillo.

"The Communist alternative and the Socialist alternative are different and cannot be mistaken," said the 35-year-old Seville lawyer. The remark was aimed at Carrillo, who recently told a television audience that socialism and communism represented the same thing.

Supporters of Premier Adolfo Suarez' Democratic Center Union made abundant use of the popular chief of government's portrait on billboards and newspapers, with the slogan: "The Sure Road to Democracy."

Insomniac can't sleep after 2 a.m.

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My problem is that I wake up at about 2 a.m. and find it impossible to go back to sleep. My doctor told me I am by nature a high-strung person and have developed a case of nervous tension. He prescribed Valium, which does help. I am taking 15 milligrams a day and have been for at least five years. I am now 61.

Will this amount of Valium result in harmful side effects? — Mr. L. W.

Chronic insomnia occurs in about 15% of the population, so you are far from being alone. Whether tranquilizer drugs (Valium is one) is your ultimate answer is debatable.

Studies are revealing some interesting facts about sleep disturbances. A consumer fact sheet on the subject, issued by the National Institute of Mental Health, reveals that many insomniacs sleep more than they think they do. Patients who report they haven't slept in days have been hospitalized and observed throughout the night by EEG "sleep recordings." The recordings show that, although the patients get a sufficient quantity of sleep, the quality is poor. Instead of the deep sleep experienced by most in the early hours of the night, these patients show only "resting" patterns similar to those measured in periods of quiet waking with eyes closed.

According to the report, no set standard can be laid down for the amount of sleep needed. It is a highly individualized thing. Sleep needs can vary from four to 11 or 12 hours, depending on the person.

Your tranquilizer dosage is in the medium range. But there are other ways you can try to conquer your sleeplessness. In fact, strange as it may seem, tranquilizer drugs can actually produce insomnia in some persons.

To Your Good Health

The NIMH report suggests moderate and sensible eating, no heavy meals late at night, no evening stimulants, moderate exercise, and avoiding daytime naps. If you awake at 2 a.m., don't lie in bed. Get up, sit in a comfortable chair and read or watch a late TV show. Be sure your room isn't overheated.

Drugs have been found helpful on a temporary basis, but they should be used only with continuing supervision by your doctor.

While your insomnia may be related to your admitted "high strung" personality, that is not always the case. A sudden, unexplained bout of insomnia should be investigated, for it can be a symptom of such physical problems as duodenal ulcer, arthritis, low blood sugar, or a condition called "nocturnal migraine."

Five years is a long time to be using a medication. I would say a re-evaluation is certainly in order.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 76 and have had high blood pressure, which is under control. I also have arthritis and glaucoma, which is being controlled with medicines. Can you explain why I have so much imbalance and equilibrium trouble. Could arthritis cause this? — Mrs. H.W.

There are several possibilities for loss of balance. Among them are eye-muscle imbalance or refractive error (correctable with glasses). Low blood potassium can be a cause, related to certain high blood pressure drugs. There can be an inner ear disorder.

Arthritis would not be a cause, but blurred vision may occur with glaucoma.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have had lower abdominal pain for the past year. My gynecologist diagnosed it as endometriosis, especially since the pain came during my period. He put me on hormone pills for nine months. I've been taking them for a month.

My question is about the side effects to expect from this hormone treatment. The alternative was surgery, which I want to avoid if possible. Your thoughts would be appreciated. — V.T.

I'll tell you what I tell other women who ask me about hormones. With regard side effects, there can be many. The commonest are headaches, increased blood pressure, possibly a facial rash (mask of pregnancy), and discomfort with any varicose veins you may have. One has to balance the effectiveness of the treatment with possible side effects, which are not inevitable. Rather than expect these or any other effects, you should bide your time and report any symptoms you have.

Hormone therapy is very effective for endometriosis (the growth of uterine-like tissue in the pelvic cavity) and it may spare you the surgery you don't want. Pregnancy often follows a course of hormone treatment for endometriosis, so you should be aware of that factor if you have had difficulty becoming pregnant because of your problem.

Reye's Syndrome is a serious illness that often is fatal to children. It usually follows shortly after a viral illness, such as flu or chicken pox.

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that of the thousands of children who come down with flu, a few, statistically, will develop Reye's Syndrome.

Usually the child will have completely recovered from the first illness and be back in school or at play before the symptoms of Reye's appear. Sudden, persistent vomiting is almost always the first sign, followed closely by complaints of fatigue, general listlessness and apathy.

The Lincoln Star

Wednesday, 5/25/77 ■ Page 13

If your child shows these symptoms, contact your doctor immediately. Mental disorientation occurs soon after the vomiting ceases. The child may become totally irrational — screaming, striking out, unable to recognize family members and other familiar faces. Unconsciousness soon follows.

The Nebraska Medical Association reports that 60% of the children affected in 1974 recovered completely.

You can better the odds of recovery by watching your child carefully after any viral illness and by acting swiftly to get help if your child displays any of the symptoms associated with Reye's.

Hospital patient faces communications gap

Editor's note: A national insurance company says the average American is hospitalized seven times in his life, and recovers six times. Here are some impressions of one who has just finished his third hospitalization.

By C. C. Minchier
Associated Press Writer

Denver (AP) — The white-haired volunteer did not look at me, or speak, as she guided me from the hospital reception desk to the elevator, up, down a long hall, and into a room where she gestured toward an empty bed — and left.

I'd barely slipped into my open-backed, bottom-baring hospital gown when a nurse came in and informed me it was "time to vacate."

I thought I was to be transferred to another room until I read the instructions on the container she had given me.

An authoritative young man, whom I assumed to be an intern, came in a few minutes later. I declined the proffered use of the television set suspended over my bed, and insisted that he put the big screen behind the curtain because it reminded me of "1984."

Later a green-clad surgical nurse named "Smitty" briefed me on the upcoming surgery and lightened my eight-year-old daughter's concern by producing multi-colored surgical caps and a mask — inspiring her to go home in costume to treat her dolls.

Eight hours before major surgery, and just after the "graveyard" shift came on, the overnight nurse awakened me to ask if I'd care for a sleeping pill.

Suddenly fully awake and worried I eagerly agreed, only to learn that she could not give me one because my chart did not call for it. I should go back to sleep.

Lying there I realized that even on death row there is no closer control, or contact, with one's guardian than in a surgical ward.

To some nurses a patient is a bell-ringing, bedpan-using, attention-demanding, half-washed flirt. I remembered a recent survey of 10,000 nurses which found only one in three would be a patient in her own hospital.

On the other hand, I quietly reasoned to the drone of the hall public address system, the average patient is kind, considerate, thoughtful, frustrated, frequently feels ignored or mistreated and is often scared.

I dozed off, as suggested.

The day after spinal surgery a cheerful nurse's aide asked if I was able to get up to wash. Advised that I wasn't she left me a damp washcloth and a towel. I washed my face and then someone brought breakfast.

Food, as anyone knows who has been confined for more than a few hours, normally offers the recipient a chance to finally exercise freedom of choice — unless he is flat on his back and looking across an array of disposable plastic dishes instead of into them.

Then one learns that the food is pre-cooked 24 hours in advance, frozen and then micro-waved back to life before being wheeled to the patient.

Washington (UPI) — Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, was elected chairman of the Midwest Conference of Democratic Senators.

He succeeds Sen. James Abourezk, D-South Dakota. The Midwest conference, more commonly known as the Midwest "caucus," is a coalition of 18 Democratic senators from 12 farm states, who study and take joint action on rural, agricultural and energy-related subjects.

Awareness of cultures eyed

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

Multi-cultural educational efforts need further strengthening in the Lincoln Public Schools, an advisory committee told Board of Education members Tuesday night.

The Multi-Cultural Education Advisory Committee, which promotes the need for cultural awareness activities within the school system, asks that staffing in that area be increased and that new school employees be required to have some background in multi-cultural education.

Chairman Pat Blair pointed to a 1974 study showing that 64% of the Lincoln Public School teachers had no college courses in multi-cultural education, and more than 70% had attended no workshops.

"The degree of achievement depends on individual school principals. Some schools have done very little," Mrs. Blair said.

The group recommends that the full-time multi-cultural position be upgraded to an administrative consultant level and that two people be appointed to work part-time with the secondary and elementary schools.

Committee members also pointed out that there seems to be a lack of material being developed or used at the secondary level and have recommended a mandatory district workshop for all secondary social studies and language arts teachers.

The board will look at administrative recommendations in the area before making decisions on the program for next school year.

"We may have a difference of opinion on how to get the work done, but not on whether it should be done," Supt. John Prasch said.

Three secondary schools — Irving Junior High, Southeast High School and Northeast High School — will move into a studio approach to art education next year, Roger Van Deventer, art consultant, told the board.

Under the studio approach students can select individual courses in specific areas like ceramics, jewelry craft, fibers and fabrics (spinning, dyeing, weaving), and two-dimensional art (drawing, printmaking, painting, photography).

Van Deventer explained the art curriculum at the elementary level where the "art liaison" teacher at each school receives training from the art consultant and then passes along that training to individual elementary teachers.

The art liaison approach was developed as an alternative to specialized art teachers who travel from school to school. Instead, the philosophy is that all teachers should teach art, just as they teach science, reading and other subjects.

On another matter, the school administration will monitor the house sale transactions in the Belmont, Zieman and Hill elementary school districts this summer in order to get some idea of the possible fall school enrollments, Prasch said.

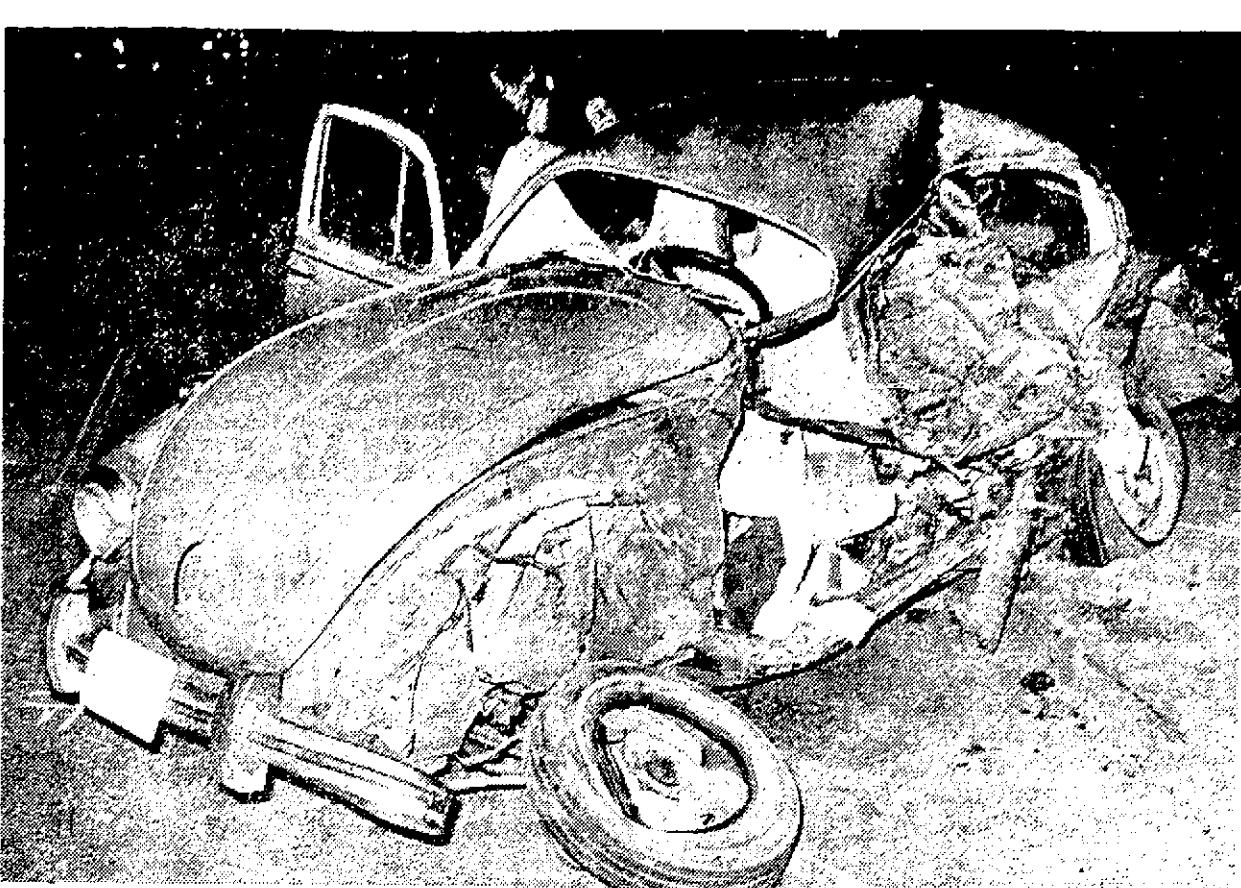

The growing Zieman school population is the most critical, but the other two must be watched also, he said.

If the Zieman school enrollment increases, the board may be asked to cancel permission to transfer for about 20 students into that school, he said.

In other action, the board agreed to purchase milk with 1% fat rather than 2% fat for the next school year at a $30,000 savings — or about one cent per lunch served.

The board also approved a $125 per pupil bus transportation fee for students who live outside the Lincoln district. The new fee is mandated by state law, said Robert Den Hartog, associate superintendent for business affairs.

And by a tie vote the board rejected a proposal by photographer Bob Olson of Photo Marketing Systems to take pictures of all graduating seniors as they receive diplomas.

Voters OK Norris school bond issue

Norris School District voters Tuesday overwhelmingly approved a $1.15 million bond issue for construction of a 37,500-square foot addition to the school complex near Firth.

With all votes counted, the tally was 672 for, 376 against, a 64% approval rate.

All four precincts approved the addition, which will include a 10-classroom middle school for grades six through eight, and a gymnasium. Cortland voters gave the issue its narrowest precinct approval, 83 to 79.

The bond will raise the mill levy 1.3 mills, which amounts to $4.55 a year in additional taxes for $10,000 appraised property value.

District Superintendent Dennis Nosal said that if all goes smoothly, bids on construction will be received in late September.

Appointments revealed by board of education

The English Department chairman at Lincoln High School, Kathryn Raymer, was appointed that school's assistant principal for instruction during the Lincoln Board of Education meeting Tuesday night.

Board members also appointed Randall McEwen, currently the vocal music consultant for the school system, as the system's music consultant.

The new job combines two administrative positions — vocal and instrumental music consultants. The instrumental consultant and director of the Lincoln Youth Symphony, Eugene Stoll, died in April after a car accident.

In other appointments the board named June Moore, an instrumental music teacher and conductor of the Junior Orchestra, as director of the Lincoln Youth Symphony, and Leslie Coor, now assistant principal at Meadow Lane Elementary School, as principal of Havelock Elementary School.

Mrs. Raymer, 30, currently is an English and speech teacher at Lincoln High, serving in a dual appointment with UNL to supervise student teachers. She also has served as English Department chairman at Lincoln High since 1973.

Mrs. Raymer, who replaces the retiring Harry Kuklin, received her bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Corr, 32, has served as instructional coordinator at Dawes Elementary School and as a teacher at Dawes.

Action LineGas meter readings cheaper bimonthly

To ask a question, call 477-2121 or write P.O. Box 81680, Lincoln, Neb. 68501.

Gassed by bills

The gas company is reading meters every two months — then how come they don't bill every two months? Why are we overcharged on the interim bills?

—N T., Crete

ACTION LINE: Cengas spokesman Collins Wilcox explains that the bimonthly readings help to keep costs down to consumers. The interim bills are figured by a sophisticated computer formula that combines past usage information with temperatures recorded during the month. Customers usually see only a small difference in bills from one month to the next, he said, and it is possible that the interim bill could be lower than the actual cost for that period. Adjustments between estimated use and actual use are made when the meter is read, and the customer is billed or credited accordingly. Wilcox said if a customer should receive an unusually high or low bill, he should contact the gas company.

Book never ordered

I keep getting statements from the Greystone Press in Oakhurst, N.J., saying I owe them $6.70 for the Complete Book of Table Setting and Flower Arrangement. I have never received the book, don't want it and never ordered it. They also claim I requested a postage-paid label which I do not want. Help!

—S R., Friend.

IMPORTANTYou Are Hereby On Official Notice That

21 days from today, your account will absolutely be transferred to:

A Collection Bureau

ACTION LINE: We described the dunning notice you received from Greystone to their customer service department. They said the letter you received is relatively late in their collection process and questioned whether you may have neglected earlier billing notices. They will check their records to see how an order was entered in your name. If a mistake has been made, they said they will correct it. In the meantime, you should write the company direct, return receipt, explaining in detail why you do not feel that you are being properly billed. A pamphlet explaining your credit rights in the billing process is available at most banks or at the library.

Pickled by anniversary

Can you tell me where I can write for the Heinz 57 "Wedding Anniversary" package? A couple here will be celebrating their 57th anniversary this month.

B.P., Pawnee City.

ACTION LINE: The best we can manage is "Happy Anniversary." A spokesman for the H J Heinz Co. confirms that the company distributed product packages to couples on their 57th anniversaries several years ago, but the promotion has been discontinued.

Hearing aid problem

In December, 1974 a hearing aid salesman came to my parents' home and sold my mother a hearing aid on a 30-day trial basis. She did not like the device and returned it within the 30-day period, but he sent another hearing aid. It also did not suit her and she asked for her money back. The last time my mother sent the aid back he returned it unopened and said there was nothing else he could do. Can you help them?

C.C.C., Lincoln.

ACTION LINE: We referred your complaint to the Lincoln Information for the Elderly Service. They told us that the Nebraska Hearing Aid Association (NHAA) has a free consumer hotline to handle complaints. That group's consumer affairs committee will contact the dealer, who will have 10 days to respond. While most complaints are resolved informally, the committee will, if necessary, file a complaint with the State Licensing Board or the Attorney General's Office to deal with any problems of unethical conduct or fraud. The phone number is 402-432-3015. Outstate residents may call collect.

By Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — In the old and merry days of England, writer John Mitford left this information for his biographer:

"For fourteen years he had not where to lay his head. Yet he has been heard to say that if his soul was placed on one table and bottle of gin on another, he would sell the former to taste the latter."

John was probably a business lunch man.

Nearly all business is done at lunch these sunny days.

The table cloth covered with black pencil calculations. Skirting the martini glasses.

"Even if you only make half of one per cent look what you get. After taxes, too!"

"The increase in business luncheons can be traced directly to the expense account," says a magazine for executives. (I subscribed to it.)

I was on the upswing in one of my manic-depressive moods.

"If a company pays top bracket taxes it will not be alarmed by a $50 lunch check since the government will pay $45 of it."

I'm sure this doesn't apply to me. The President is going to charge me more taxes. That's what I read.

I think what makes the business lunch go is the credit

Spelling learned by constant drill

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

"Theresa, eyes up . . . spell and read the words."

The directions are short and crisp and to the point.

The children's answers are the same.

It's "word attack time" for first and second graders at Bethany Elementary School, and the 90 students' work in small groups or individually, sometimes sitting on the floor filling out worksheets or murmuring spellings to themselves.

Gone are the 10-word spelling lists. The children learn to spell the most frequently used words as they appear in their reading lessons. They also learn to write the words, said Mary Lou Mordan, director of a nationally recognized reading program known as Project Instruct.

Repetition, both in practice and instruction, is a key word in the reading program, cited by the Health, Education and Welfare Department's education division as "outstanding," and worth copying by other school districts.

The five teachers follow a precise pattern of what to teach, when to teach it and how to teach it.

Each teacher uses the same vocabulary as she teaches words through sight, phonics, word structure and context.

"Read and spell" is one familiar instruction. "My turn," and the teacher gives the correct response: "your turn," and the children give the response.

They also use similar nonverbal directions: moving the hands toward themselves if they want an answer, winks, pats and smiles for rewards.

Exercises for the students are also designed for repetition, said Mrs. Jo Ann Childress, who has worked with the program for five years.

The office area for the teaching team is lined with dozens of file drawers containing worksheets developed by the teachers. The children often must write each word 10 times on the worksheets.

"The repetition helps the child remember the spelling of that word," said Mrs. Childress, team leader.

The systematic teaching of basic reading, spelling and writing skills was developed in Lincoln about seven years ago with the help of federal funding. Since then it has been incorporated, at least in part, by most of the Lincoln schools.

The Bethany teachers have trained others in Project Instruct both at the school and through a series of workshops throughout the United States.

Students move through the program at their own pace, learning one skill, then going on to the next. They work individually and in small groups.

A variety of games and instructional devices is used to make the learning process easier and more interesting. Lotto and bingo have been converted into writing games, games that teach vowel sounds, contractions and spelling. In the spring children put tails on a kite -- each tail a word or sound that has been taught that day.

The program allows for little guessing. "We want every answer the child gives to be the correct one so he can know success," said Mrs. Mordan.

But children can circumvent even the best of intentions. When children were asked to make up a sentence for a group of words ending in "ent," one little boy piped up, "I took my dog to the vent."

Project Instruct works, however, according to HEW and the teachers at Bethany. "We're sold on it," said Mrs. Childress.

The teachers have seen improvement in children's spelling and in their responsible use of time.

An HEW news story on the project said that "results of school-by-school achievement tests in reading and spelling show children in Instruct schools score significantly higher than those in schools not using this method."

Woman resents second fiddle treatment

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago I married an older man after waiting for three years for him to get a divorce.

He settled out of court, giving his wife practically everything she asked for, including a beautiful home and all the furnishings.

He says he wants her to have the house for his children's sake. (They have three teenagers.)

Last summer he invited his three children to spend two weeks with us in our small apartment, but they liked it so much they stayed a month! Now he wants to do it again this year.

I would leave tomorrow, but I have a 7-month-old baby and another one on the way.

He treats me well, and I'm not exactly starving to death, but it bugs me the way his ex-wife and three children always come first.

Should I get out now while I'm still young and have my looks, since talking to him does no good? Or should I be quiet

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

because he also provides me with a good home?

NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: Nowhere have you mentioned that you love him. It appears that you are concerned mainly with money, material things and getting the short end of the deal. Only you can decide whether you're getting more out of this marriage than you're putting into it. But I suggest that you do some adding and subtracting before you do any more multiplying.

DEAR ABBY: Would you say it was proper to "neck" (or whatever you want to call it) with your ex-husband? And how about going beyond that point?

He still turns me on.

LYNNIE

DEAR LYNNIE: It is just as proper to "neck" (if that's what you mean, that's what I'll call it) with an ex-husband as it is to neck with any other single man. However, past relationships confer no special privileges.

DEAR ABBY: I had to laugh when I read the letter from HAD ENOUGH, the 16-year-old girl whose mother insisted she have a second nose job because the first one was lopsided.

That letter brought memories of the "nose job" my mother gave me when I was 13.

One evening I was washing the dishes and my mother was drying. I was giving Mom a lot of guff, whining and complaining. Let's face it, I was mouth off.

Thanks, Mom.

Gwen

DEAR GWEN: You've really got it together, Honey. However, I'm opposed to violence of any kind.

He grins just like old cars

Philadelphia (AP) — Steve Weisberg started doing impersonations of cars at age 3.

"My mother was always afraid my face would freeze in the shape of a Hudson," says Weisberg, now 26.

"As a kid I noticed cars had facial expressions," he said in an interview Tuesday. "You know, the Studebakers, the Packards, the Nashes."

"I still like to do the old cars best, the ones from the '40s and '50s. Each was different. Now, they've lost their personalities. They're more beasts of burden."

Weisberg says the hardest car to imitate is a 1952 Henry J. The easiest is the 1955 Chevrolet.

"Every muscle in your face hurts after the Henry J," he said. "It's all in the upper lip and it's hard to hold."

President Carter's toothy smile reminds him of the grille of a 1955 Chevrolet, he said.

The '55 Chevy definitely predated Jimmy Carter's smile . . . The 1950 Studebaker looks like Alfred Hitchcock."

When not grinning grills, Weisberg works as a secretary for a medical firm.

"Take almost any car, put it all together man, and you've got yourself a face," he said. "The old Citroen, the 1949 Hudson, they had definite facial figures."

"Remember the Ford of 1950? If you curl your tongue around and stick it just slightly through your lips, you've got one."

"A 1955 Ford looks like someone throwing a French kiss."

Weisberg said he'd received 10 invitations to imitate cars since he appeared on the Mike Douglas show.

Opening lead — jack of diamonds.

There is a tendency to react mechanically in certain situations, because they are so similar to many others frequently encountered before. But this tendency to play in accordance with previous experience proves costly at times, which is precisely what happened to declarer in this deal.

South won the diamond lead with the ace, played a trump to the ace, and led a spade to the jack, losing to the queen.

West made a good defensive play when he returned a trump. Declarer won the return in dummy and led another spade, this time losing his king to the ace. When West now led a third round of trumps, South was at the end of his rope. He later lost a spade and a club and went down one.

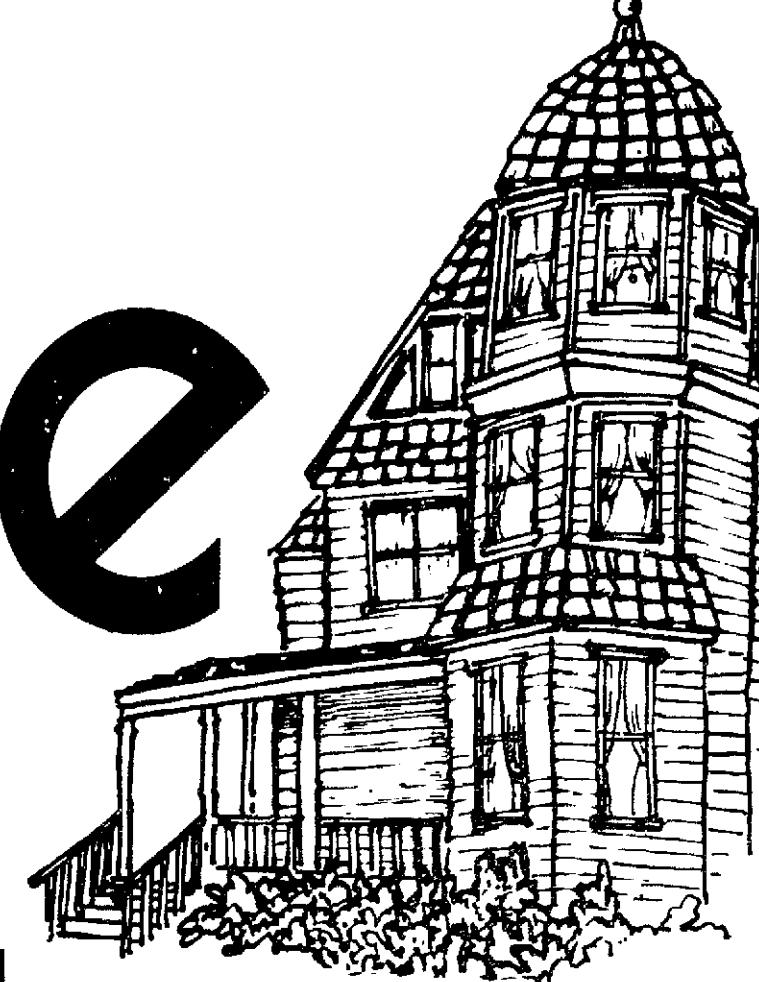

The odd part of the deal is that South would have made the contract quite easily had he held three low spades instead of the K-J-9. In that case, after winning the diamond lead, he would have played a spade from his hand to assure a later spade ruff in dummy and thus guarantee his tenth trick.

But South's K-J-9 of spades created an illusion that caused him to lead a trump to dummy so that he could lead a spade towards his hand. This opened the gate to further trump leads by West that cost declarer the contract.

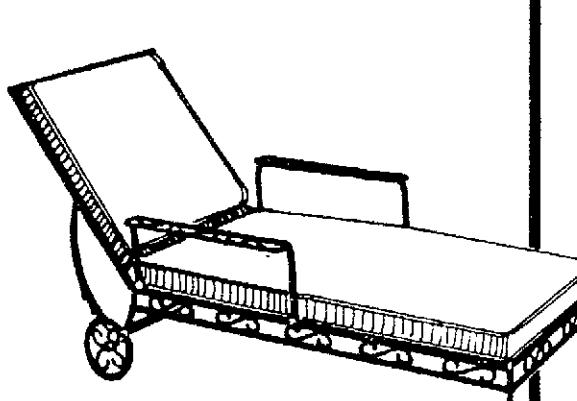

Of course, it's extremely rare for a declarer to lead from the K-J-9 towards dummy's 6-2. But if that is the best way to handle such a combination in a particular deal, declarer should do so. The best way to play a suit doesn't always coincide with the best way to play a hand.

One charged in motel death

Omaha (AP) — A Colorado woman has been charged with murder and police are searching for a Colorado state prison escapee also charged with murder in the death of a young Iowa businessman at a motel Monday.

Police said Mary Katherine Larson, 24, was arrested about 20 minutes after Gary Damron, 20, of Urbandale, Iowa, fell beaten and shot in front of the lobby desk of the Ramada Inn Central after he was allegedly robbed of $5 by a man and woman.

Ms. Larson was charged Tuesday with first-degree murder in the commission of a felony.

Police said Tuesday that a warrant charging the same crime has been issued for Wesley Massey, 32, who authorities said was serving a 20 to 40 year sentence in Colorado when he escaped April 25 with four other inmates.

A second escapee believed to have been traveling with the pair, David Anderson, 38, apparently was not involved in the death of Damron, police said.

Both Massey and Anderson were at large.

Police said Damron died in an Omaha hospital after he was beaten and shot during a fight that started in a second floor room and continued in a hallway, an elevator and the first floor lobby.

Police Capt. George Hauger said Damron apparently met a woman in the motel bar and went with her to her room, where a fight with another man started.

A detective said Ms. Larson is charged with enticing Damron to the room in order to rob him. It was not known whether the man was in the room at the time or entered later, the detective said.

Hauger said it is believed Damron was shot by the man after he tried to flee from the elevator when it stopped at the first floor. Damron fell in front of the lobby desk after he was shot, Hauger said.

The detective said Ms. Larson was on parole in Colorado.

He said Anderson apparently was not in the hotel at the time of the incident.

Preliminary reports indicated Damron may have died from injuries suffered in the beating and not the bullet wound.

Colorado Prison at Canon City said only Massey and Anderson, of the five escapees, were still at large. Two of the inmates were found the next day in a hay barn about 20 miles from Canon City. A third was picked up in a pasture south of Pueblo April 27.

Massey was serving a sentence for robbery, aggravated robbery and possession of weapons. Anderson was sentenced to life for being a habitual criminal.

The five were working at the prison license plant when one of them pulled a .38 caliber revolver on two guards, tied them up and fled in a prison pickup truck with one guard. The guard was found unharmed a short time later on a nearby street.

For sale is this McCook building, built by famed architect Frank Lloyd Wright.

Historic building dealings continue

McCook (AP) — Negotiations continued Tuesday for the sale of the only structure in Nebraska designed by famed architect Frank Lloyd Wright.

The building is located in downtown McCook and was offered for sale at auction Monday. All bids were rejected as insufficient by Dr. J. Harold Donaldson Jr., the building's owner.

Tuesday, Donaldson visited with several prospective buyers in hopes of negotiating a sales agreement in the near future.

The building was designed by Wright in the early 1900s for Mr. and Mrs. Harvey P. Sutton of McCook. The structure was completed in 1908 following an exchange of letters between Wright and Mrs. Sutton over a three-year period.

Donaldson bought the building from the Sutton's surviving children in May of 1960 and from then until May 1 of this year has used it as a medical diagnostic clinic and laboratory.

Donaldson said all of the building's furnishings and medical equipment have been sold.

Harold P. Sutton, the last living child of the Suttons, remembers that shortly after the house was completed, Wright stopped to see it while en route to the West Coast.

Sutton recalled that Wright and his mother quarreled terribly about how the house was furnished, but no changes came about because of it.

Mrs. Sutton initially told Wright she wanted to spend no more than $2,000, but the final cost of the home was $10,000.

Fire struck the building in 1932, damaging the basement, walls and roof. The original porch roof was destroyed and local carpenters were unable to figure out how to rebuild it in the same design. A different replacement was built.

The two-story house later was remodeled into two apartments, one on each level.

Donaldson remodeled the interior and finished the laundry and coal rooms in the basement when he bought the structure.

Sutton said all that remains of the original Wright design is the exterior walls and the leaded windows and doors.

Donaldson also built a block fence surrounding the building and installed fish ponds.

Indians to stay on land pending case

Omaha (AP) — A three-judge panel of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Tuesday that a group of Omaha Indians may remain on about 2,900 acres of farmland along the Missouri River northwest of Omaha, Iowa, pending completion of their court case.

The decision by Judges Donald P. Lay, Roy L. Stephenson and William H. Webster was handed down in St. Louis one day after the Indians argued their case for an extension of a temporary injunction before the panel in Omaha.

In ruling that the Indians could remain on the land pending hearing of their appeal, the court said it expressed no opinion on the merits of the Indians' arguments.

The court said its previous order to expedite the case still stands, and ordered all briefs to be submitted by June 10. The court said it would hear the case during the week of June 13 in St. Paul, Minn.

Italy, Soviets trade

Rome (AP) — Italy and the Soviet Union have set out a 10-year program of industrial cooperation which emphasizes heavy industry and chemicals, the Italian foreign ministry announced.

William Veder, Washington attorney, charged Bogue erred in ruling against the Indians. Although the Missouri River has changed course over the years, he argued, the Indians still are the rightful owners although the disputed land now is on the Iowa side of the river.

Peter J. Peters of Council Bluffs, Iowa, representing one of the whites, said Bogue ruled for the whites after extensive study and a visit to the site.

Peters said the whites should be allowed to move onto the land and farm it while the Indians appeal Bogue's decision.

The attorney said the Indians are letting much of the land lay unused.

Police suspect pimp, prostitute

Omaha (AP) — A youth police say is a teen-aged pimp and girl who allegedly is an adolescent prostitute are being questioned in the death of an Omaha construction worker last week, according to police.

Authorities say Harold D. Hay, 38, was found bleeding and unconscious last Thursday, a few hours after being beaten by the accomplices of a prostitute he picked up early that morning. Hay died the next day.

Police say the youthful pair and two other young men are undergoing questioning and will perhaps be given lie detector tests in the investigation. One of the other youths is the brother of the alleged pimp.

The Douglas County attorney's office said no charges have been filed.

Central Tech College tuition to increase 10%

Grand Island (UPI) — The Central Technical Community College area board has approved a 10% tuition increase for the 1977-78 school year.

The increase will bring total resident tuition for two semesters or three quarters to $330. The current rate is $300.

Area President Dr. Chester Gausman said the increase was necessary to meet rising costs and to put the colleges in line with tuition rates charged at other colleges throughout the state.

Enrollment at the area's campuses in Hastings, Columbus and Grand Island is just over 4,700. Total enrollment, including various educational centers throughout the area, is 16,000.

Gausman also presented a proposed budget for fiscal 1977-78 for the board's review. Tentative action on the budget proposal can be taken in June, but the budget can't be formally adopted until after an Aug. 29 public hearing.

The board also voted to drop the civil engineering program at the Hastings campus. The staff recommended the action because of high costs and the availability of similar programs elsewhere in the state.

Killer dog pack hunted

Alliance (UPI) — Box Butte County authorities say a full-scale hunt has begun for a pack of killer dogs that appears to be inching its way toward this small Panhandle community.

Sheriff Bill Stairs said the dogs, which have been terrorizing and killing livestock in Box Butte County for about a month, were seen within a mile of town last weekend. The dogs killed 70 chickens just outside of town during the weekend, and had killed 25 sheep prior to that, he said.

Stairs said the dogs appear to be killing for pleasure instead of food.

Bellevue election declared invalid

Papillion (AP) — The 1976 Bellevue city elections were declared invalid Tuesday by Sarpy County District Court Judge Ronald Reagan because boundary lines were unconstitutional.

The ruling followed a state Supreme Court reversal and vacated the present eight-man City Council. Reagan ordered a special at-large election to be held.

But the judge stayed execution of his order to allow Bellevue City Atty. John Rice to study the problem and possibly appeal the ruling.

"I wonder if any city in Nebraska can have district elections," Reagan said.

Reagan ruled last year that the boundary lines, and thus the election, were legal. But the state Supreme Court sent the case back on appeal with a notation that "local governments cannot disregard the most recent federal census."

The ruling means that local governments in the state may use only federal census figures in drawing up district boundaries.

Bellevue had a census in 1970 and a special census four years later. The city annexed a section called Twin Ridge II after the 1974 census, but before the 1976 primary.

In computing the population of the area, about 1,200, for the election, the city found that it had not been broken down into an individual census tract.

City Administrator Jeff Renner testified that the area was broken up into two sections, with each a part of a larger separate census tract.

Thus, Renner said, it was impossible to determine the exact federal census for the drawing of new boundaries.

Renner said his department counted the houses in Twin Ridge II, then multiplied by 3.5 persons to come up with totals for redistricting.

Attorney Delbert Pelton attacked this in a citizens' lawsuit filed by Mathew Pelzer, an unsuccessful candidate for the council. Pelton maintained the city should have used the census alone.

In the retrial Tuesday, Pelton said the city substituted its "unsupported judgment" for the federal census.

"It was doing the very thing the courts have prohibited," he argued.

Among other things, Pelzer's suit asked for at-large elections.

Reagan said under the ruling it probably would be impossible for any city in the state which had annexed any new area to have a district election.

He said his ruling pertains to all council seats, not just the four that were voted on last year. However, in his stay of execution, Reagan said he would give the city an opportunity to research the matter and then for Rice and Pelton to work out plans for an election.

Mock disaster will test local preparedness

It could happen here — a helicopter crash like the one that turned parts of downtown New York City into a holocaust.

In fact, it will happen here, Thursday morning, but the time and place will be known only to emergency personnel, to protect the innocent and keep the curious just that, curious.

The helicopter crash, and resultant fire, will make this "the largest such exercise ever planned in the city" and will utilize "emergency procedures never before tried," according to Norm Francis, Lincoln-Lancaster County

Emergency Services coordinator. Some 150 simulated casualties, made up by professionals earlier in the morning, will be treated "on-site" and the entire operation will be conducted through a command and communications post at the scene, Francis explained.

The reasons behind the mock-disaster are two-fold, Francis added. First, it's the best way to develop a "workable plan should the city and county ever have a major medical emergency or other disaster. Secondly, it will give the news media a chance to "let the public know what is being done about such a plan," he said.

Fire and rescue units will approach the area "Code Three" with red lights and sirens when the exercise begins. Francis said A chemical will be ignited at the simulated crash site to "give the firemen something to cope with when they arrive and give an added sense of realism to the victims as well as the response personnel," he added.

Overland travel offers adventure — but for the hardy only

Zagora, Morocco (UPI) — A sign in the center of Zagora points toward the next major town to the south. It reads: "Timbuctoo — 52 days."

Beyond Zagora there is nothing.

Behind it on the Sahara's fringe there is nothing much, either, and the town itself is no prize.

Yet Zagora is a regular port of call these days for a new kind of world-ranging package tourist.

These travelers sneer at plush hotels and gourmet restaurants and instead "rough it" all the way. The only ice water they get is rare camp showers.

This burgeoning army of "adventure" or "overland" tourists aims to go where other tourists don't, or go as far as possible as cheaply as possible.

They start in London and go overland to Nepal. They circle the United States and Canada, crisscross South America sideways and Africa from top to bottom. They camp on Iceland's glaciers, sail on feluccas down the Nile, swim at south India's beaches.

Every trip is tough to some degree — many "adventure" companies refuse to take passengers older than 38. But the business has boomed over the last five years.

It is peculiarly British. Pennworld, a British firm, is the biggest and oldest of some 70 companies in the field. One of its tamer trips — a two-week winter circuit of southern Morocco — was typical.

This trip jammed 22 strangers of five nationalities into a four-wheel-drive truck with a tin box body. Luggage and sleeping bags rode on the roof. Water, food, tables and two-man tents crammed the back.

Every night the 15 men passengers unloaded the whole truck. Everyone set up his tent. The seven girls did most of the cooking while the boys scrounged wood for an after-dinner campfire.

Every morning they reloaded and got on the road by 8:30 a.m. The 22 partners in adversity did not stay strangers long.

"During the first 16 years this business was fairly low profile, but in the last five years it's gotten really big," said Peter Amor in a London travel agency which specializes in booking adventure trips with all available companies.

"We'll do between 15,000 and 20,000 trips this year," Amor said. "More than half of these will be one-way transcontinental trips. Many of these are the Australian thing."

Overland travel began with "the Australian thing" — young Aussies seeking cheaper and more adventurous ways than ship or plane to get to Europe and back.

Even now the major overland trips — 80 days from London to Katmandu, 13,000 miles from London to Capetown — connect with Australian flights. One company using a London double-deck bus as a mobile hotel takes 20 weeks from London to Sydney.

On the Morocco trip, driver-leader Dick Ali, an ebullient Australian of 27, spurred on his flagging charges with scorn for "plastic tourists" with their air-conditioned buses and innerspring mattresses.

He first took his 22 vacationers, only two over 30, to no-star hotels in Casablanca and Marrakesh. They descended like locusts on a Marrakesh market and stocked up $450 worth of vegetables and canned food.

Then it was into the Berber country beyond the high Atlas Mountains, a wild and desolate semi-desert.

Zagora, Ali promised them, meant "real luxury" — an organized camp site with icy outdoor showers.

Zagora itself is an arid and frontier outpost, a wild west town in Arab dress. Its red mud buildings cluster at the end of a date palm oasis, a green ribbon running along the Draa Valley all the way to the Atlas foothills.

In the wilderness beyond Zagora, Ali's adventurers touched the true Sahara and played like children on sculpted sand dunes three stories high. "There are fewer of these sand seas than people think," Ali said on the golden sand of one rippled dune.

Ali knows the Sahara firsthand. He has crossed it and skirted its fringes for more than two years, leading various African trips. About the only African journey which has eluded him is that trek to Timbuctoo.

"Some of the companies go there," he said, squinting south into the emptiness. "I'll make it some day."

Write-On

Were the 'old days' that good?

By Glen L. Gingles

Were the good old days really that good? Or do we tend to remember only the bright parts and forget the agonies?

I remember 1932; that was the year I got married. Even the minister tried to talk us out of it. And with good reasoning. The Great Depression had the Midwest in its grip. Many were out of work and there were no food stamps or ADC as we have today.

But we were young, light-hearted, and foolishly confident. I had a job. For $17 a week, I worked 6 days from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., 9 p.m. on Saturday, with 30 minutes off for lunch. The boss said anyone could eat lunch in 20 minutes. Many we knew had no steady work, only occasional odd jobs such as scooping corn, shocking wheat, or cutting weeds. These people flocked to the city dump or dug through garbage cans behind hotels and restaurants.

President Hoover, running for re-election, assured us that the Depression was almost over. New York Governor Roosevelt was also in the race and promised great things if elected. Little did we dream that the worst was yet to come. We were yet to have bank holidays, severe droughts, 10 cents a bushel corn, 10 cents a dozen eggs, beef prices so low they wouldn't pay the freight to market.

A year later we would be thrilled by Wiley Post's solo flight around the world in an airplane; newly elected President Roosevelt would tell us, "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself"; people would be drinking 3.2 beer and singing, "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?"

In the fall of 1932, I got married and we fared as well or better than most of our friends. I remember we had lots of fun. For a dime we could go to the Joy-O theater in Havelock or we could watch the walk-a-thon at Capitol Beach free. On rare occasions when we ate at a restaurant, we paid 50 cents for a T-bone steak dinner, or 35 cents for swiss steak. More often we went to Hotel D-Hamburger and bought six hamburgers for a quarter. I could get a dress shirt for 79 cents, my wedding suit cost $15 but I could have bought one for less. A pair of work shoes cost $1.79. Pork cutlets were two pounds for 25 cents, soap 23 cents for 10 bars, oleo 10 cents a pound. The oleo was white and came with a packet of coloring if we wanted to use it. Oranges were two dozen for 25 cents, tokay grapes three pounds for 15 cents, potatoes 25 cents a bushel. A two-pound can of Folgers or Butternut coffee sold for 59 cents, beef roast was 8 cents a pound, for 25 cents you could buy two packages of Luckies, Chesterfields, Old Golds, or Camels.

Vice President Charles Curtis campaigned in Lincoln for Hoover. Huey Long for Roosevelt. The Yankees, with Babe Ruth, beat the Cubs four straight in the World Series. University of Nebraska football season tickets sold for $7.50. D X Bible coached the Cornhuskers. Ed Wear the freshman team.

"Back Street," starring Irene Dunn and John Boles, and "Bird of Paradise," with Deolores Del Rio and Joel McCrea, were showing at local theaters, also Harold Lloyd in "Movie Crazy." Cy Sherman wrote about sports in his daily column, "Brass Tacks." Oz Black drew cartoons for the Sunday paper. "The Married Life of Helen and Warren" ran endlessly in the Sunday paper. Mary Gordon and Minerva's Mail handled the problems of the love-jorn.

These, then, were the good old days — if you look at them through rose-colored glasses.

Potential candidates

York (UPI) — A citizens group has selected five potential candidates to challenge incumbent York County commissioners if a petition drive for a recall election succeeds.

The committee for an alternate courthouse plan subject to voter approval is seeking the recall election because the commissioners approved plans to construct a new courthouse without voter endorsement. Leonard Ellis, George Wochner, Russell Bredenkamp, Charles McDuffy and Margaret Brink were selected as candidates at a meeting attended by an estimated 300 persons.

Olson heads students

Omaha (AP) — Thomas H. Olson of Lincoln, a first-year medical student, has been elected 1977-78 president of the University of Nebraska Medical Center's chapter of the American Medical Student Association.

Other officers named include: Julie Schroeder Zeilinger of David City, vice president; Sharonelle Simmons of Lincoln, secretary; and Vicki Petersen Philben of Omaha, treasurer.

Carter gets fire post

Grand Island (UPI) — Grand Island officials Tuesday announced

the appointment of James Carter, 36, as the new city fire marshal, effective immediately.

Carter replaces Gene Scarborough, who has been city fire marshal for the past four years. The new marshal has been a captain with the department since July 1, 1975.

Ambulance service shifted

Hastings (UPI) — The Adams County Board Tuesday voted to remove ambulance service from jurisdiction of the county sheriff's office, ending a month-long controversy on the issue.

The three ambulance attendants who recommended separating the service were fired for alleged insubordination by the sheriff's office after they "went outside departmental guidelines" in seeking support for separate ambulance service. The attendants are scheduled to serve again once the new ambulance service site is chosen.

'80 bridge start seen

Omaha (AP) — Construction of a new Abbott Drive bridge near downtown Omaha could begin by 1980, according to Burt Whedon, acting Public Works director.

The cost estimate for the Abbott project and related streetwork downtown is $11.8 million to $12 million.

Opponents plan meet

Yutan (AP) — A citizens group organized in opposition to announced plans by Omaha's Metropolitan Utilities District to pump up to 120 million gallons of water daily from an area in Saunders County close to the Platte River says a public meeting is planned soon.

Cliff R. Zicafoose, president of the group called WET, Inc., said the newly-formed board of the group met in Yutan to plan for a public meeting concerning MUD's plan. No date has been set for the meeting, he said.

CB violator fined

Omaha (UPI) — An Omahan changed his plea from innocent to guilty Tuesday and was fined $500 by U.S. Magistrate Richard C. Peck on two counts of violating citizen band radio statutes.

U.S. Attorney Daniel Wherry said Sam Dibaise, 33, pleaded guilty to making CB transmissions without using the proper call signals and to making a continuous transmission for more than five minutes. The third count, using obscenity over the air waves, was dropped in exchange for the guilty pleas, Sherry said.

Dr. Norman J. Rosenberg, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln staff member, will attend the Nordberg Memorial Symposium on food information systems June 8-10 in Tel Aviv, Israel.

Rosenberg, agricultural meteorology section leader, will serve on a space research committee at the symposium, which is sponsored by the International Council of Scientific Unions.

About 200 people from all over the world will meet in Tel Aviv for the symposium, at which the application of space technology to agriculture will be discussed, Rosenberg said.

Besides attending the symposium, Rosenberg said, he plans to visit the agrometeorology laboratories at the Volcani Institute and the Israel Institute of Technology.

One card celebrates 54 birthdays

Omaha (AP) — Elizabeth Reynolds and her cousin, Ruth Rose, have been exchanging the same birthday card for 27 years.

It all began April 30, 1950, when Mrs. Rose mailed Mrs. Reynolds a card with a little Scotsman on the front and the message, "Aye'm only a-renting you the card."

The card was returned to Mrs. Rose Jan. 3, 1951, with a note: "What's the charge for nine months' rent?"

Over the years, the two Omaha women have seen postage on the card increase from four to 13 cents. They've worn out three envelopes.

One greeting, written on the card last Jan. 3, commented, "Did you hear via radio about the two girls who have exchanged a card for 19 years? Mere pups, huh?"

Neither woman knows if their exchange sets a record. But the card is beginning to show some travel fatigue. Said Mrs. Rose: "We may have to have it laminated."

The league also set priorities for the next two years in: water, energy, land use, Equal Rights Amendment ratification, county government, corrections, protective services for children and equal rights for Nebraska native Americans.

Wilderness Park Hiking Trail will be dedicated in a Friday afternoon ceremony as a National Recreational Trail.

Bruce Hamilton, chairman of the Lancaster County Board of Commissioners, will speak.

Revised plan likely due for county board

Chadron (UPI) — The Dawes County Planning Commission has indicated it will probably forward a revised comprehensive plan to the county board in its current form unless there are requests for major changes.

The planning commission heard testimony Monday about the proposed comprehensive plan for the county, which is an update of a comprehensive plan developed in 1941.

Donna Dufek, who owns property adjacent to the Box Butte reservoir, questioned whether the plan provided adequate protection for her property so it could not be condemned by the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission for recreational use. County Commissioner John Paris said the protection was adequate, but a member of the planning commission said he was uncertain.

Dawes and Box Butte counties may delay implementation of their plans until legislation pending in the Unicameral is acted upon.

The bill, LB186, would change the requirements for filing comprehensive plans, but it has stalled in the Legislature.

Omaha (AP) — One of the cofounders of the Omaha Hearing School, Dr. Frank J. Klabenes, was found dead in an Omaha motel room Monday afternoon.

Acting Douglas County Coroner James Keenan declined to give a possible cause of death. Police and a motel employee who found the body said several empty prescription bottles were found in the room.

Dr. Klabenes, 63, was an ear, nose and throat specialist.

He had been arrested May 10 in Council Bluffs and charged with assault with intent to commit a felony (sodomy).

Nebraska State Mothers honored

In ceremonies Tuesday in the East Senate Chamber of the Nebraska State Capitol, about 75 persons gathered to recognize an institution as American as apple pie and hot dogs — mother. The Nebraska State Mothers presented its two highest awards. Diane Davis and Dickie of Mitchell received the state's Young Mother of the Year Award. Dr.

Margaret E Hasebroock of West Point received the 1977 State Mother award.

Mrs Hasebroock is the wife of State Sen William Hasebroock. She has received many awards, among them the Good Neighbor Award in 1960 from Ak-Sar-Ben, the Doctor of Humane Letters degree in 1966 from Midland College in Fremont and the Distinguished Service Award from Wayne State Teachers College.

From 1964 to 1966, Mrs Hasebroock was international president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. During that time, she directed development of Sin-Ai village in Korea.

Mrs Hasebroock said that all people, sometimes in their life, becomes examples to those around them. People are able, even though many do not realize it, to form patterns in other people's lives.

"This is an obligation we carry with us at all times," Mrs Hasebroock said.

Earlier in the ceremonies, Lt Gov Gerald Whelan presented the Young Mother of the Year Award to Diane Davis Dickie of Mitchell.

Mrs Dickie and her husband Jim have six children, three of them adopted. She attended Platte Valley Bible College and is active in the counseling program sponsored by the Nebraska State Young Mothers.

Mrs Dickie said that she wouldn't change her role as a mother "for anything in the world."

She said one of the most important aspects of being a mother is to show her children "genuine love." That type of love, she said, is the closest to the love of God.

Mrs Dickie said it is also important to teach children that their life has a "real purpose."

"We have to teach them to reach out for life goals," she said.

Honored were Mrs. Hasebroock (front) and Mrs. Dickie, escorted by Sen Hasebroock and Sen William Nichol.

Handicapped teen program uncertain

By Bob Reeves

Budget-slipping may prune back a Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation (LOMR) summer school program for nine severely-handicapped teenagers.

The county board Tuesday delayed action for a week on a request by LOMR for advance approval of $6,000 in next year's budget to continue schooling for multiply-handicapped youths until the Lincoln Public School System takes over their education in August.

Lincoln Public Schools have contracted with LOMR to provide closely-supervised instruction to the youths for the present school year and for a six-week half-day summer program through July 22.

The county agency is asking for county funds to expand to full-day sessions up to July 22 continuing full days until Aug. 29, when a new program administered by the public schools will begin.

The board delayed action at the urging of Commissioner Bob Colm, who said sufficient funds may not be available for the program.

Dr Donald Sherrill, director of special education for Lincoln Public Schools says a 12-month program for the multiply-handicapped is under discussion for next year.

The costs for three of the youngsters, not residents of Lancaster County, would be paid for by their counties of residence, LOMR Director Bill Templemeyer explained.

Lincoln Public Schools have a statutory responsibility to provide schooling only for nine months of the year, Sherrill said.

In other business, the board appointed a task force to consider the advantages of putting LOMR under the direct administration of Region V Mental Retardation Services, rather than the county board, as at present.

The task force will study changes in the level of services staff and budget, and disposition of county property that the change would entail. They are to report their findings to the board by July 1.

Members of the task force include "citizens at large" Robert Mahoney, Jack Carey, James Bozarth and Oscar Sandburg, mental retardation professionals Ken Keith and Marie Arnot, William Giovanni, city budget director, parents of LOMR clients, Wayne Osborn and Peter Pfeifer, a LOMR board representative, Donald Humphrey, and an ex officio county board representative, Wayne Hart.

The board also approved appointees to the Attention Center advisory board on an interim basis through September 30. Lincoln Municipal Court Judge Thomas McManus, Lancaster County Court Judge Jeffre Cheuvront, Diana Bloss, county attorney's office, Sgt Gary Hoffman, Lincoln Police Department, Sgt.

Charles Langloss, Nebraska State Patrol, Dr Darrell Grell, Lincoln Public Schools, Dr Keith Leech, Lincoln Regional Center, Elaine Carpenter, League of Women Voters, and Mary Wakefield Peterson, youth representative.

A contract for $555.50 per month for fiscal 1977-78 was awarded to the O'Keefe Elevator Co for weekly inspection and maintenance of elevators at Lancaster Manor.

Contracts with three companies for gravel and rock for county roads were awarded. Approved bids of $12,600 and $54,800 came from Western Sand and Gravel Co of Lincoln. A $33,410 bid by Schwarck's quarry of Lincoln also was approved.

There was some controversy about approving the $54,240 bid of Hopper Bros of Weeping Water. The County Engineer's office had specified that trucks with beds no longer than 10 yards be used. Hopper's was the low bid using 10-yard trucks, but Schwarck's quarry entered an even lower bid using 20-yard trucks.

County Engineer Marv Nuernberger recommended approval of Hopper's bid, while Harold Schwarck, the low bidder, appeared before the board to protest.

On the advice of the county attorney's office, the board voted to approve Hopper's bid, despite Schwarck's claim that he could do the same job using larger trucks.

Charter group bobs up, disappears again until fall

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

A city advisory group that disappears for long periods of time bobbed up again Tuesday with talk on two proposals to revise the city's charter.

The group is the 15-member Charter Revision Commission, which has lost some members since it met last in April, 1976.

Krivosha said the payment is growing rapidly because of the rising cost of energy. This year the payment was $1.7 million; by 1983 it will be $5 million, he said.

Critics of the payment argue that it is a hidden tax because people paying their electricity bills do not realize that 5% goes to subsidize government and education.

Commission members theorized several reasons why the proposal lost last year. They blamed everything from misguided newspaper editorials to veiled threats by school officials that voting for the elimination would increase property taxes.

After discussion, the commission decided to recommend that LES show on every bill how much of the total goes to governments and schools.

City Atty. Charles Humble told the commission members that although the charter provision forbidding city employees from campaigning for city office was struck down, he still feels its intent was good.

Restricting political activity of public employees helps reduce machine politics, Humble said, in which for example, a mayor might be able to marshal a force of about 2,000 city employees as campaign workers.

Also during the meeting, the commission requested that Mayor Helen Boosalis appoint members to fill vacancies of those who have resigned and whose terms will expire.

Airman convicted of burning cross

Lakenheath, England (AP) — A U.S. Air Force court-martial board convicted an American airman Tuesday of setting a Ku Klux Klan-style cross ablaze at the Lakenheath Air Force Base.

The four officers forming the court found Airman 1. C. Henry H. Hooper, 19, of Milford, N.J., guilty of violating Air Force regulations barring protest activities on military property and of conspiring to violate the regulations.

Hooper denied the charges. The board said he would be sentenced after trials have been completed against five other young military policemen also accused of burning a 12-foot wooden cross on the base football field Feb. 14. Maximum sentence upon conviction is six months at hard labor.

Capt. Kevin Tepas, defending Hooper, told the board there was no indication of Ku Klux Klan activity at the base and the incident was only a prank.

But the base commander, Col. Robert Platenberg, testified he regarded the cross burning as "insurrection or mutiny."

The other defendants in the proceedings, expected to stretch into next week, are Airman Patrick Ryan, 20, of Victor, N.Y.; Senior Airman Bernard Popp, 21, Chicago, Ill.; Airman Gary Ferguson, 21, Glasgow, Ky.; Sgt. Gary Paquette, 21, of Manchester, N.H., and Senior Airman Mark Vinson of Ashland, Neb.

Vinson is charged with making a telephone call in connection with the burning. The other are charged both with conspiracy and burning the cross. They all pleaded innocent.

At the U.S. Marine base in Camp Pendleton, Calif., a recent Navy report said Marine members of the Ku Klux Klan planned to attack black Marines after a barracks raid that left six whites injured.

It said Marines belonging to the KKK, White Brotherhood and American Nazi party held four "war councils" and carried riot guns, explosives and other weapons.

The Navy began an investigation after 14 blacks raided a room where whites were having a beer party last November. Six of the seven whites in the room were injured by screwdrivers or clubs. The blacks, who were ordered court-martialed, said they thought they were breaking up a KKK meeting but entered the wrong room, according to the report.

Omaha man arraigned on 3 robbery charges

An Omaha man was arraigned Tuesday in Lancaster County District Court on charges stemming from three robberies in Lincoln last February.

John "Fitzie" Fritz, 21, pleaded innocent to three counts of robbery and three counts of using a firearm to commit a felony. Fritz also entered a plea of insanity.

The robberies occurred Feb. 12 at the Bethany IGA, 1432 N. Cotner Blvd., Feb. 14 at Jax Liquor, 27th Street and Woods Boulevard, and Feb. 15 at Marion's Off Sale, 3855 South St.

Trial was set for the July 5 jury term.

Retire apron strings in style

Washington (UPI) — Rep. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said homemakers should get a "fair shake from the federal government."

To aid that effort, Grassley announced he is cosponsoring legislation to allow homemakers to set up their own tax-sheltered retirement accounts.

Grassley said the legislation would end discrimination against homemakers, the majority of whom are women.

Sen. Dole opposes consumer unit bill

Chicago (UPI) — Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said he will oppose the Consumer Advocacy Agency bill, calling it "an idea whose time has come and gone."

In a speech to the International Foodservice Manufacturers Association, Dole said the government was more responsive to consumer interests and that most existing agencies "already have an office of consumer affairs headed by a consumer activist."

Merna rejects liquor proposals

Lincoln Star Special

Merna — A "very good turnout" of voters in a special election here Tuesday resulted in the defeat of both liquor proposals on the ballot, Mrs. Lois Bergstrom, city clerk, reported.

An addition and remodeling of the Davenport Community School building is planned with the funds.

By a vote of 106 to 58, liquor-by-the-drink was rejected. The proposed sale of package liquor was turned down by a tally of 103 to 62.

Hershey voters nix bond issue

Lincoln Star Special

Hershey — In a special election held here Tuesday night, voters in the Hershey school district turned down a $1.2 million school bond issue.

The unofficial tally on the proposal was 248 for the issue, 273 against, according to the Lincoln County clerk's office. All the absentees ballots are included with this count, it was reported.

The funds, if approved, would have provided a new elementary school for Hershey.

Lincoln youths plead guilty to King's robbery

Two Lincoln youths pleaded guilty Tuesday in Lancaster County District Court to the robbery of the King's Food Host restaurant, 1650 Cornhusker Highway last February.

Tracy Quick and Marvin Goodro, both 17, both entered guilty pleas to robbery charges, and the Lancaster County Attorney's office dropped charges of using a firearm in committing a felony.

Judge William Hastings deferred sentencing pending an investigation by the probation office.

Ban on burning lifted for state

The statewide ban on open burning was lifted Tuesday by State Fire Marshal Paul Sarnecki.

Mammoth bones hunted near Broken Bow

Broken Bow (UPI) — "If you drill down 1,000 feet," says George Corner, "you will strike ocean sediment."

This indicates, he says, that Nebraska was under the ocean at one time, perhaps 1,000 years ago.

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln's paleontology department, of which Corner, 29, is a member, is more interested in Nebraska when it was a great inland sea, supporting marine lizards, gigantic turtles and great mastodons and mammoths, Corner said.

"That was only 150,000 years ago," he says, "which is like yesterday in paleontological terms. It was about the Middle Ice Age."

Corner was in Broken Bow recently to investigate a site on the Leland

McCaslin farm that could yield the fossil remains of what Corner called "a primitive mammoth" that may date to 150,000 years ago.

He said it may predate the oldest such mammoth discovered several years ago at Wellfleet south of North Platte. He said bone portions of the animal found by the McCaslins appear to support his contention.

The great elephants, parts of which pop up periodically across Nebraska, were probably a "stream bank community," Corner says, feeding on High Plains grasses and coming to the great lake bank for water.

"Probably they died there (on the bank) and became part of the silt," he said.

The remains of the McCaslin mammoth were found in a canyon 30 feet deep. Other parts of the animal, such as the spinal column, have been viewed and photographed by the McCaslins, but during the two days Corner spent on the farm, digging superficially, nothing was uncovered.

"That's not unusual," Corner said. "The top of the bank has probably slumped over to cover it."

Retrieving such large parts of the animal from such a deep canyon may be a problem, he said. "The shoulder blade and pelvis of the animal will probably weigh something like 6,000 pounds each," he said.

Corner estimates the McCaslin find is about the size of a large circus elephant, standing 10 to 11 feet from head to toes.

The key to turning the site into a major dig, he said, depends on finding several key parts, such as a lower jaw bone, a humerus, radius or ulna. These would clearly show how old and how large the skeleton is, he said.

Such Ice Age animals can be found in nearly all counties of Nebraska, Corner said, except the Sand Hills area. Other animals commonly found are ancient camels and horses.

Dinosaurs, he said, are found more in the highlands, such as the Dakotas, Wyoming and Colorado, than in the plains of Nebraska.

Another site Corner is watching is the south beach of Lake McConaughy, where, he said, the water has washed up large parts.

Miller stipend winners picked

Eight University of Nebraska students have been selected winners of the $1,000 Donald Walters Miller Scholarships.

The scholarships were established in honor of the president of the Lincoln Miller and Paine Store who was the son of the founder.

Recipients are Jane Marie Emanuel, North Bend; DeVayne Milton Hughes, Omaha; Judy Ann Hunke, West Point; Alan Craig Nelson, Broken Bow; Ann Louise Owens, Lincoln; Karen Paulette Schultz, Ponca; Candace Kaye Tysdal, Lincoln, and Lori Jane Wolpa, Omaha.

Smith doesn't expect swift farm bill action

Omaha (AP) — Rep. Virginia Smith says the House farm bill will not be taken up until the Senate has acted, probably in late June or early July.

The 3rd District Nebraska Republican congresswoman said it's possible action on the House bill will not be completed until some time after the August congressional recess.

On another topic, Mrs. Smith said in a news release that prospects for repeal of the Hatch Act this year "are much more dim than anyone suspected at the beginning of the session."

The repeal would permit 2.8 million federal employees to run for office and to take a more active role in partisan politics.

Mrs. Smith said no hearings has been scheduled on the measure in the Senate and she said "it is not likely they will be scheduled."

She said there is no assurance the House will complete action on the measure, either.

School districts' merger favored

Doniphan (UPI) — Preliminary results of surveys conducted in the Trumbull, Doniphan and Giltner school districts indicate a majority of those responding favor consolidation of the three districts.

Of 990 surveys mailed to residents of the school districts, 512 have been returned.

At Doniphan 55% of those responding favored consolidation. In Trumbull 75% favored consolidation and in Giltner 58% indicated they were in favor of continued efforts to consolidate and reorganize the districts.

Doniphan Supt. Doug Thompson said the school boards involved will probably meet sometime in June to decide if and when the consolidation should be put to a vote.

Doniphan residents would like to have the school built there, but to be fair to the other districts "a neutral midpoint would be better," Thompson said.

Dick Martin's not out to pasture

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some comedy teams end explosively, as in the cases of Abbott and Costello, Martin and Lewis, and the Sunshine Boys. Not so with Rowan and Martin.

Because of the remarkable ratings of "Laugh-in," Dan Rowan and Dick Martin may have been the most successful comedy team in the history of television. Now, after 26 years together, they have decided to spend most of their professional lives apart.

"Dan simply said he didn't want to work so hard," explained Martin, the zany, bassett-faced member of the duo. "If he figures he would rather just sit and dangle his fishing line in the water, that's fine with me. He has worked hard; he deserves it."

Rowan came to his decision last fall, said Martin.

"Our last date together was the Nugget in Reno," Martin recalled. "Dan has diabetes, and his doctor advised him to cool it. So Dan told me, 'You do what you want to do and I'll do what I want to do. If there's something we can do together, fine. But I just don't want to work so much anymore.'"

So far in 1977, they have combined for only three one-night engagements and one TV special. Rowan has made a pilot for a talk show, and he has followed the tennis circuit. But he spends most of his time at his new home in Manasota Keys, Fla.

Martin emphasized that semi-retirement is not for him — "I love the business too much to just sit around." But what to do, aside from the usual round of game shows, talk shows and TV guestings?

The answer came one night when he was complaining about the lack of challenge in his career. Artie Price, Bob Newhart's manager, suggested, "Why don't you direct?"

"I don't think I'm qualified," the comedian replied. He was convinced to become an observer on "The Bob Newhart Show," and for three weeks he studied every facet of production.

Then he was asked to direct a show, "The Heartbreak Kid."

"It was like being thrown into the deep end of the swimming pool and being told to sink or swim," Martin recalled. He swam, enjoyed directing immensely, learned more of the craft during three weeks in the cutting room.

MTM Productions wanted Dick Martin back. Not only to direct one-third of the 24 shows for next season, but to act as creative consultant on the series. That's part of the change aimed at pleasing star Newhart, who tried unsuccessfully to exit the series.

"Part of my job is to see that it won't be a chore for Bob to go over to Beverly Glen (from his home to the studio) every day, but that it will be goddam fun," explained Martin. "No wonder Bob wanted to quit. The show had become a burden."

Some of the changes Martin has helped institute: Newhart doesn't have to be in every scene ("we've cut the heavy expository dialogue"); four of the shows will be aimed at costar Suzanne Pleshette, with Bob shooting his scenes at a later time; scripts will be read a week in advance so last-minute changes can be avoided.

"I've been the star of a show, and I know what it is like to be consulted," Martin added. "Bob simply wasn't being asked about anything. Yet here is a guy who wrote six gold albums. Why not make use of a great comedy mind?"

Videotape seen as Hollywood's salvation

EAGLE ROCK, Calif. (AP) — What is Jim Aubrey doing at a record store in this slumberous Los Angeles suburb?

After all, wasn't James T. Aubrey the powerful dictator of CBS programming and later president of MGM? But there he is every morning, reporting to an emporium of rock records on Colorado Blvd.

What he is doing is producing a movie on tape about the pop music scene, "Record City." That's right, a movie on tape. He firmly believes tape can be a salvation for the movie industry.

"Out of this may come a revolution," he suggests. "This picture would have cost one and a half or twice as much if made on film by an independent company. It would be two and a half times if made by a major studio." The cost of "Record City": "comfortably under $1 million." He would not say how far under.

Aubrey seems far removed from the years when he was juggling TV schedules with a masterful (some said ruthless) touch. Also from the years when he was slicing off MGM's assets in an effort to keep the company from falling into bankruptcy (he succeeded). The well-trimmed hair is grayer, but the tall figure remains boyishly slim and the outlook youthful.

He was relaxing among the record bins while a scene was being taped in another part of the Aubrey "studio" — actually an abandoned supermarket that has been converted into a record store plus a few other indoor sets.

"In getting a perspective from being away from it for awhile, it seems to me that the movie business is getting hairier and hairier as the gamble gets bigger," Aubrey theorized. "It's evident that movies can't compete with television for the mass market."

Look what happened to Life, Look and a lot of newspapers because of television. They couldn't compete in the general market. Survival in the publishing business came through specializing.

"It's the same thing in the movie business. If the major audience is between the ages of 15 and 25, then a producer should design entertainment especially for that age level."

"He also has to bring in a film for a reasonable price, preferably under a million dollars. Then he's in pretty good shape, because the television sale alone will help produce a profit. The networks are paying $850,000 to make their own movies, so they should pay that much for one that has appeared in theaters. And they will pay two or three million for a hit."

In searching for a subject that had youth appeal and moderate cost, Aubrey decided to combine comedy with contemporary music — "not a score but single records, as in 'American Graffiti' and 'Car Wash.'" Why not, he reasoned, make the setting a record shop, where the music would be indigenous?

Comedy writer Ron Liebman wrote the script, and Aubrey lined up "independent financing." Dennis Steinmetz is directing a cast that includes Michael Callan, Frank Gorshin, Ruth Buzzi, Jack Carter, Deborah White, Larry Storch and Alice Ghostley. Most are old pros, accustomed to the speed of performing on tape.

"Since 'Record City' is aimed at the young audience, we needed to release it in the summer. We'll have an answer print (final version) the first week in June. Post-production on film would require at least three months."

Aubrey explained how he arrived at the decision to use tape, then transfer the finished product to film:

"One of the things that bothered me about the film business was the reluctance to try new methods. Whenever I suggested something new, the answer was always the same: 'This is the way we've always done it.'

"The advantage of tape has always appealed to me. Now it is practical, since the tape-to-film transfer can be accomplished with no loss of quality to the normal viewer."

"Since 'Record City' is aimed at the young audience, we needed to release it in the summer. We'll have an answer print (final version) the first week in June. Post-production on film would require at least three months."

Tape-to-film has been tried before, notably on the David Wolper Entebbe raid special. One drawback has been the lack of mobility of tape cameras. Aubrey claimed that problem has been solved, and "Record City" has made shots with racing cars in the Eagle Rock streets.

Poitier directing 'Piece of Action'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Action!" called Sidney Poitier on the other side of the door, but the door was locked. "Cut!" said the director-star as the film crew burst into laughter.

"Action!" Poitier called again. This time the door opened but a spotlight was smoking. "Cut!" He tried the scene again but the camera was out of focus. All he had to do was walk into the scene, flash the Poitier smile, and continue past the camera. But to the merriment of his fellow workers, including Bill Cosby and James Earl Jones, seven takes were required before Poitier called a final "Print!"

The Poitier stock company is at work once more, this time with James Earl Jones instead of Harry Belafonte. The title: "Piece of the Action," formerly called "Something Big Is Coming Up."

As with "Uptown Saturday Night" and "Let's Do It Again," the emphasis is on action and laughs, with social comment being incidental, Poitier dreamed up the idea, wrote it with Charles Blackwell, is directing it for his First Artists Company (partners: Barbra Streisand, Paul Newman, Steve McQueen, Dustin Hoffman) for Warner Brothers release.

While directing and acting, Poitier takes time out for nothing else. But his co-stars were conversant, and Bill Cosby had some insight on the Poitier operation.

"If you were to read the scripts of any of these films," Cosby remarked, "you would probably say, 'Why on earth are these fellows wasting all that time and money?' The scripts just don't read that good."

"The real work comes right here on the stage, when Sid and I and the rest of the company get down to putting it on film."

That's when the fun begins."

James Earl Jones indicated that he was enjoying the Poitier method.

Curiously, this is the first time that Poitier and Jones have worked together, although their friendship goes back several years.

"I remember the first time I met Sidney," Jones reminisced. "It was during the Cuban missile crisis, and I was appearing in an off-Broadway show, 'P.S. 193.' Sidney came backstage and said some nice things about my performance. He predicted I would do well, and he gave me this bit of advice: 'Don't be in a hurry to go out to Hollywood.'

"That was the best advice I could have had. Whatever distinction I have received started with my work on the stage."

When he finally came to Hollywood in 1970, he arrived as a star. He played boxing champion Jack Johnson in "The Great White Hope," which won him a Tony on Broadway and an Oscar nomination for the film.

"Piece of the Action" is not a sequel to the earlier films, Cosby emphasized. "These two characters are a bit sprightlier in their step," he said.

Poitier and Cosby play a couple of inner-city Robin Hoods who make handsome livings by ripping off those who victimize the ghetto inhabitants. They get caught by a detective (Jones), who insists that they pour their ill-gotten gain into a failing youth center.

"What I liked about the script," explained Jones, "was that it is not just a caper movie. That's just the surface. The belly, the guts of the story is the kids at the youth center and what their lives are like. The same with 'Claudine'—the best part was not the comedy, but the attitudes of the younger vs. the older generations."

South Africa again plans to request readmission into the International Olympic Committee. In 1970, South Africa was barred from participating in the Olympics due to its policy of apartheid, or racial segregation. As a result of the ban, some 30 sports were thrown into limbo in international competition.

The case will be presented to the IOC when it meets in Prague next month.

Horse racing

A black businessman from Chicago is interested in buying Bowie Race Course but feels the asking price is too high, according to a former general manager of the race track.

Both sides in the strike by 600 mutual clerks at the New York Racing Association's Belmont and Aqueduct Race Tracks met Tuesday to discuss a state mediator's recommendations for ending the walkout.

Baseball

Left-handed pitcher Andy Hassler, coming off the Kansas City Royals' disabled list, will be reinstated Wednesday to the roster.

Pitcher John (Blue Moon) Odom, a veteran of three World Series and two All-Star games, will play for the Mexico City Tigers of the Mexican Baseball League for the remainder of the 1977 season.

Gary Ward, coach of Yavapai Junior College in Prescott, Ariz., the nation's top-ranked junior college baseball team, Tuesday was named baseball coach at Oklahoma State University.

A Little League baseball player collapsed and died Monday night when he was struck in the chest by a pitched ball. Officials said Thomas Steck Jr., 8, was pronounced dead at a Joliet hospital.

Right-hander Vern Ruhle has been placed on the Detroit Tigers' disabled list to make room for Mark "The Bird" Fydrich.

Football

Miami Dolphins' defensive tackles Randy Crowder and Don Reese were ordered Tuesday to stand trial June 27 on five narcotics charges, including the alleged sale of a pound of cocaine to undercover agents.

Ken Stabler, who quarterbacked the Oakland Raiders to the Super Bowl Championship this year, was named the "Super Man Of the Year" by the Pro Football Writers Association.

Top-seed Ilie Nastase of Romania beat Argentina's Lito Alvarez, 7-6, 6-3, 6-2 and American Brian Gottfried routed Ivan Molina of Columbian, 6-3, 6-2, 6-1, Tuesday to advance easily to the second round of the French Open Tennis Championships in Paris.

Yvon Durelle, former Canadian and British Empire light heavyweight boxing champion, was charged Tuesday with second-degree murder in the shooting death of Albin Poirier, 32, of Baie Ste. Anne, Durelle's hometown.

Financing of the Cleveland Barons' hockey team through a program of investing in the Midwest Coliseum, the team's home ice, is beginning to come together as the NHL's June 8 deadline approaches, a report indicated.

Misty gains 3-2 victory

Misty Lounge remained undefeated with a 3-2 win Tuesday night over Falstaff in the Lincoln AAA Softball League at Ballard Field.

Misty pitcher Paul Ude scattered eight hits and struck out two in boosting his record to 5-0 as Misty moved to 6-0. Don Crouch scored the winning run in a two-run sixth inning on a three-base error.

Jim Kraus swatted two singles and scored once for Misty.

In the second game, Valen-

Carstens wins Dobbins award

Lincoln High senior Dean Carstens was named the 1977 Harry Sidney Dobbins Award winner at the school's Senior Awards Convocation Tuesday morning.

The trophy, established in 1913 by Lincoln Journal writer Harry T. Dobbins in honor of his son, recognizes the Lincoln High senior boy who has best combined athletic abilities, citizenship and scholastic achievement.

Carstens lettered two years in football and baseball and one in basketball, earning all-city honors in all three sports.

A member of the National Honor Society, Carstens ranks 26th in his class of 446. He plans to attend Kearney State on an athletic scholarship.

Seward softball tourney slated

Seward — The Seward Merchants team of the Al Hawthorne League is holding a June 4 softball tournament here.

Indy 500 'buy-in' rule is predicted

Houston (AP) — Indianapolis 500 qualifier Roger McCluskey said Tuesday sanctions likely will be taken by the U.S. Auto Club to prevent a race driver from buying his way into the field of the historic Memorial Day classic.

"I don't think much of it," McCluskey said. "I hope I never get into a race like that."

McCluskey referred to a case at Indianapolis Motor Speedway where veteran driver Salt Walther, bumped in qualifying runs Sunday, bought a car that already had qualified and took the place of its driver, Bill Puterbaugh of Indianapolis.

"I think you'll see steps will be taken to see that kind of thing doesn't happen again," said McCluskey, who qualified ninth in the 500 field. "Otherwise, that could start a dangerous trend."

"If someone wants to buy a car that's fine. But there ought to be some kind of stipulation that the driver who qualified the car gets to stay with it."

Puterbaugh qualified a car owned by Lee Elkins at 188.8 miles per hour but then Elkins sold the car to George Walther, president of the Dayton-Walther Corp., which sponsors cars for his son, Salt.

"You'd have to be careful with any ruling though," McCluskey said. "You wouldn't want to punish the car owner if, say, the driver got sick."

McCluskey praised Janet Gathrie, who became the first woman ever to qualify for the 500.

"I don't think she'll be running for the lead but she did a great job in qualifying," McCluskey said. "They had trouble and had to rebuild the engine which can hurt your confidence. But they worked hard and got it right."

One week after driving in the Indianapolis 500, McCluskey will be at College Station's Texas World Speedway for the USAC-sanctioned Texas 500 stock car race. A.J. Foyt, Houston, trying for an unprecedented fourth Indy title Sunday, also is entered.

Drivers are unhappy

Indianapolis (UPI) — The auto racing fraternity has only harsh words Tuesday for driver Salt Walther's purchase of a starting spot for the "500" but conceded it was legal under the rules for the Memorial Day classic.

There was no indication, however, of an organized effort by drivers or owners to boycott the million dollar race Sunday, although some said they were taking a wait-and-see attitude.

Driver Bill Puterbaugh, who qualified the car and then had it sold out from under him, said he still was hopeful of being in the 33-car field.

"I'm being advised by friends on what to do," said Puterbaugh, who declined to say whether they included attorneys.

"I don't know if I'll start, but I hope so. I feel bad. This thing caught me by complete surprise. I got a phone call from my car owner's son, who told me that the car was sold for $60,000 and that I was out of a ride."

"There isn't anything else I can say."

Tom Binford, chief steward and top official for the race, confirmed the sale and driver change were legal under USAC rules. Puterbaugh was given $6,000 compensation by the Walthers and promised more after the race.

Both Walther and his father George, who heads the Walther racing team and purchased the qualified car from owner Lee Elkins, were out of town and unavailable for comment. It was learned Elkins approached the Walthers and promised more after the race.

about buying the machine.

Other drivers, owners and racing officials were vocal in their unhappiness about the deal, which will allow Walther to start in the last spot in the field.

"I think it's a very unsportsmanlike thing," said driver John Mahler, a late qualifier this year who was ousted in a somewhat similar incident in 1971. "It's a damn shame somebody like Billy is treated in that manner. I think USAC should get off its—and change the rules."

Mahler said he thought the rule should have been changed after 1971 when he qualified a backup car owned by driver Dick Simon and was replaced behind the wheel by Simon when his own racer was bumped.

"No person should be able to buy his way in," agreed Frank DelRoy, chairman of USAC's technical committee. "The man who qualifies a car should be entitled to start the race."

"I think the board of review should implement a rule that a car and driver qualified must start the race, barring a driver being injured or unable to start for another bona fide reason."

Vel Miletich, co-owner of the car that two-time race winner Al Unser will start in the first row, said, "It gives auto racing a black eye. It's terrible when you can buy your way in. I don't think car owners should be able to sell after their car is qualified."

Robinson still not out at Cleveland

Cleveland (AP) — Cleveland Indians President Ted Bonda says Frank Robinson will remain manager of the American League baseball team "as long as we feel it is right" — and adds it still is right now.

That was Tuesday, and Bonda admitted he couldn't say how long things would continue to be right or how long Robinson's job was assured.

But with a variety of background sniping having been cited in reports that Robinson's tenure was in jeopardy, Bonda tried to make at least one thing firm and clear: "The final decision is mine."

Reports have cited General Manager Phil Seghi's dissatisfaction with Robinson, apparently stemming from last fall when Bonda went ahead and granted Robinson another contract.

Seghi currently refuses to be drawn into the discussion, saying only that his top priority is to return to the victories that started the season but then became almost as scarce as hen's teeth.

Slumping McGinnis loses his confidence

The slump-ridden McGinnis reached a new low for him when he scored just eight points and grabbed but two rebounds Sunday as the Philadelphia 76ers beat the Portland Trail Blazers 107-101 to take a 1-0 lead in their best-of-seven National Basketball Association championship series.

"I feel like a rookie," McGinnis said before Tuesday's practice for the second game here Thursday night.

"I'm blind trying to find my way to the rest room," said the 6-foot-8 superstar, shaking his head in wonderment at his predicament.

McGinnis averaged 21.4 points per game for the 76ers during the regular season, a fraction under Julius "Dr. J" Erving. He has averaged just 13.7 in the playoffs.

"We have to have him (in form)," said 76ers Coach Gene Shue.

"We can't continue to survive in the playoffs if George is not making a contribution," Shue observed. "If they (Blazers) shut down Doc or Doug (Collins), and with Lloyd Free injured and George isn't doing it, we'll stall."

Does Shue have any idea what's wrong with McGinnis?

"He got himself into a rut as a result of a groin injury. Now he's feeling much better but he's having difficulty getting out of the rut," Shue said. "You know George has been our top rebounder all year. All I can say is that he's equipped to handle his own problem."

But McGinnis admits that he's confused.

"I can't explain it. Maybe it has become a mental thing. It's a hell of a feeling. And I feel worse when I'm not playing."

McGinnis said he worked around his farm and then hit a few tennis balls Monday to get his mind off basketball. He also read the hundreds of letters from fans advising him how to shake the slump:

He said the gist of the mail is to hang in there no matter how tough it gets.

"But it's killing me," McGinnis said, the hurt etched in his face.

"I can't continue like this. I could handle it better if I had been in a situation like this before. But I've never been in this position before. It's not an easy feeling to go to sleep with," McGinnis said.

"There is no question about it, I'm due to get a good game under my belt. I really feel it's going to happen Thursday. Doc's been carrying us, but one of these nights he's going to be off. I better be ready."

McGinnis appears to have lost his confidence. He's hesitating on 12- and 15-foot jumpers that he used to make with his eyes shut.

"You're right, my confidence is shot," he admitted sadly. "I've got to get it back."

NWU to track meet

Nebraska Wesleyan has qualified in eight events for the NCAA Division III men's track championships which begins Thursday in Grand Rapids, Mich. The three-day meet will be hosted by Calvin College and NWU Coach Woody Greeno has high hopes for his Plainsmen team which has set six school records this spring.

"We finished tied for 12th last year out of 61 schools that scored," says Greeno. "I suppose Jim Glen has the best opportunity to place high for us. He got second in the triple jump last year at the nationals."

Greeno is also optimistic about Scott Howe in the long jump, Craig Mundt in the 400-meter IM hurdles and Bob Carlson in the 10,000-meter run. "23'8" won the long jump last year, so we feel Howe can place," forecasts Greeno. "If Bob Carlson runs as well as he did when he went 29.51 for six miles, he could do well, too. 29.44 won the six-mile for Cliff Karthausen in 1975."

Sprinter Don Rossbach has also been entered in the 100 and 200-meter dashed and will join Glen, Doug Caulkins and Mark Minchow in the 400-meter relay. Bob Quick will also make the trip, having qualified in the 5,000-meter run.

"We have never floundered in the national meet," concludes Greeno. "We've been near the Top 10 the last few years and we're hoping to improve over last year."

Greeno sees last year's top two teams, Southern U. (New Orleans, La.) and Brandeis U. (Waltham, Mass.) as the top challengers for the title again this season. The Plainsmen will leave by van Wednesday for Grand Rapids.

Doane to Michigan

Crete — Doane Track Coach Fred Beile will take a 13-man team to the NCAA Division II national outdoor track and field championships at Calvin College, Grand Rapids, Mich., this week. About 40 teams and more than 400 small college athletes are expected to compete.

Decathlete Dan Mussmann of Fremont is ranked third nationally and begins his competition on Tuesday. He placed fourth in the national meet last year with 6889 points.

Tim Edwards of Crete and Fred Falkner of Omaha were also point-winners for the Tigers last year, Edwards in the 800 meters and Falkner in the 400 meters. This year Edwards will run the 1500 meters and Falkner will stay at 400 meters.

Athletes have to meet a performance standard in their events to qualify for the national meet.

Vaulter Rick Cotton of Gering is Doane's lone entry in the NAIA outdoor nationals at Arkadelphia, Ark., this week. He is ranked second nationally and was runner-up in the NAIA indoor meet in Kansas City. His current best is 16-10 1/4.

He is awake and alert," said Dr. Schenker, adding it would take six weeks for complete healing of his arm fracture.

In addition to breaking the ulna bone in his right arm, just above the wrist, Cauthen also fractured the middle bones on two fingers and one rib—all on the right side.

He needed 10 stitches to close a cut above the right eye, and had no after effects from a slight concussion.

Jorge Velasquez, the other jockey injured in the Belmont spill, was released from the same hospital on Monday night after his left foot was placed in a cast for fractures of the ankle and heel.

Cauthen's mount, Bay Streak, broke a foreleg and went down in the fourth race Monday, creating the three-horse spill. Prior to the injury, Cauthen had 252 winners in New York and 275 overall.

"He's a little black and blue," reported his mother, Myra, who flew from her Kentucky home early Tuesday to join her son. "He had a little smile on his face and I was encouraged."

She and her husband, Ronald Cauthen, a blacksmith on Warnerton Farms, learned of the accident by telephone from Steve's guardian, Mrs. Linda Taliaferro. Mrs. Taliaferro was at the track, heard the public address announcement and immediately joined Cauthen at the hospital before getting in touch with the Cauthen family.

Steve Cauthen noted the rib fracture bothered Steve Monday night, "but he never really complained. It's the first time he's ever broken any bone."

It's All Outdoors

By Tom Vint

Big day Thursday

Thursday is the day many of us in the field of sports coverage in Lincoln have been waiting for, at least since last year's exciting (?) initiation of the Maybe Annual Lincoln Sportswriters and Sportscasters Fishoff.

Yes, folks, this Thursday is the day for Maybe Annual No. 2. From 14 p.m. some of the worst fishermen in the area will hit the waters at Branched Oak. Last year something like five bluegill, one just legal bass and a baby walleye bit the dust.

Actually, to say my fellow sportswriters and sportscasters are the worst fishermen in the area would be unfair. Suffice it to say the nightcrawlers aren't afraid when they go on one of their hooks.

Headlining the affair will be a host of Lincoln Journal and Star anglers, to include sports editor Virg Parker, prep editor Randy York, girls prep editor Chuck Sinclair, staff writers Dave Sittler, Ken Hambleton and Gary Svoboda. And of course, your outdoor editor will be there with his first aid kit.

Also to be attending are guest fisherman Tom Osborne of University of Nebraska football coaching fame; KLIN's Nebraska sportscaster of the year Don Gill and KLIN fishing buddy Stan Linnertz; KFOR's unbeatables Dick Perry, Bill Wood and Jim Miller; KLMS's Judy Converse (who vowed to fish the socks off all we male chauvinist sports reporters) and Frank Green; and KOLN-TV's one and only Dick Janda.

It should be a lot of fun, barring 40 mph winds. Weigh-in is at 4 p.m. at the Branched Oak Marina. Once again Fred Griffin of Griffin's House of Boats will subject the good name of Chrysler boats to the ridicule of hecklers as the winners pick up charity prizes from Jan Perrin and Surplus Center.

Lighter, wetter side

While talking on the light side of things, I try to get up to the Minnesota Governor's Walleye Opener Party every chance I get just to hear the latest in Burke Evans stories.

Burke is the outdoor editor of the Waterloo Courier in Iowa. He has this thing about fishing and getting wet. The two, to him, go hand in soggy sock.

Burke is the guy who two years ago, fishing with a teenaged guide on his first outing, set the hook on a walleye and tossed his rod out the boat on the other side. Not wanting to lose the fish, Burke hesitated an instant, then dived in to retrieve his rod. He found the fishing pole, fish still attached, handed it up to his fishing partner and climbed back aboard to land his fish. The young guide has never been the same.

He's also the guy who was retrieving a gas can from the dock one day, straddling the boat and dock when the boat started to pull away from the dock. Burke stretched as best he could, then sat down in the lake.

Another episode, Burke's buddy Bob Brown of Fort Dodge, Iowa, wanted a picture of Burke and some fish one day. They were on the dock and apparently Bob couldn't get all of Burke and the fish in so he asked Burke to back up. He did. Right off the dock.

Exciting isn't he?

Well, this year Burke was at it again. He and Brown were sampling the crappie fishing the day before the walleye opener and launching their boat in a particularly shallow lake. Burke said the boat was hung up in some of the weeds as they paddled to open water so he said he'd just stick his foot in and push the boat out.

"Would you believe those weeds were six feet deep?" he asked, in total amazement. Brown said he was half in, half out of the water when he caught on to the side of the boat.

"Only half wet is a record for Burke," said Brown.

I can hardly wait until next time.

Wouldn't he be great for a life preserver commercial?

Northern anglers will get chance

United Press International

Wisconsin's Lake Winnebago walleyes will be the target next month for 200 of the nation's top fishermen — many of whom will be trying for the sometime elusive but always good eating fish for the first time.

The occasion will be the first "National Walleye Tournament" June 18-19 and Brian Callaghan of the Mercury Division of Mercury Motors freely admits it started as a publicity stunt to promote a new use for stern-drive engines.

"But as we became more involved in the planning and concept of the whole thing, several things came out," he said. "First of all we realized we were putting on the first national fishing tournament of any significance in the upper U.S."

"All the rest of the national tournaments are southern bass tournaments. Many fishermen, especially those in northern fishing clubs, if they want to pursue tournament fishing, they have to go down south and they have to fish for bass."

Callaghan said he approached the Cruisers Division of the Mirro Aluminum Co. in Oconto, Wis., with his idea for a "walleye boat" and the production people were excited about the concept. He said they agreed to build a prototype using a deep sea cruiser hull. This will be the boat awarded as first prize.

"If it goes off well, they (Cruisers) would like to introduce it with their 1978 line," Callaghan said. "We'd like to see other boat manufacturers do the same."

Second prize in the tournament will be a small boat and motor with third prize a 20-horsepower Mercury outboard.

Callaghan is the tournament coordinator and professional fisherman Don Woodruff is the tournament director.

Woodruff contacted the Department of Natural Resources to make sure the tournament was legal and to find out if such intense fishing pressure would hurt the resource of the 137,700 acre lake.

He said his office also was told that Curt Gowdy, a well-known fisherman and televi-

To Sydney Omarr from Henry Miller: "You are an amazing critic!" To Omarr from a critic regarding his book or dreams: "The stupidest book ever written!" To Omarr from an astronomer: "You are a general reading an army of the most foolish books!" To Omarr from a director of a university music department: "Your utilization of numbers and planets is ingenious, very closely related to music, the music of the spheres!" ★ ★ ★

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on service, helping others. New approach to routine matters is necessary. One who should have performed basic work was lax. Now, you must streamline procedures. Take nothing for granted. Get to heart of matters.

TAURUS (April 20-May 19): Good Moon aspect coincides with favorable job opportunities. Be prepared. Follow through on hunch. One who taught you in past is once again available. Know if and don't permit pride to block progress. Yes, an Aquarian person figure prominent.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Fun at home could be keynote. Refuse to be subjugated to "foolish pressures." Family members may want to "play" their cards. Stay above and beyond certain nonsense. Look beyond the immediate. You are going to travel, express, to expand horizons. Know it and do not be limited.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You're able to overcome barriers, obstacles and to communicate with relatives. Your job satisfaction is high. Desires, desires. Key now is to "interpret" messages, nuances, moods. You're going to be happier—and you will make that discovery in a very "natural" way. Yes, take the trip!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis on personal possessions, the ability to make the most of material things. Creative urge is activated. You are good for art. Style and substance combine; you can be at right place at right time. Gain indicated through written word.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Obtain valid hint from Leo message. Cycle high—judgment, intuition sparkle. Be confident, make personal appearances. Wear bright colors. Be aware of numbers. Family home is your second home. You model reaction or change surroundings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What you do, say, think could be misinterpreted. Know it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are introspective, sensitive, fond of reading, lecturing, drawn to spiritual curiosities. It is high desire. You are eager to learn, to analyze, to dissect ideas. You are often disillusioned because you seek perfection in places and people. August could be your outstanding month of 1977. A year which sees you realizing some of the goals of the last year. You individuals play important roles in your life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Relationship intensifies. Obtain hint from Libra message. If you are merely testing waters, you could be fated for rude awakening. Commitment is necessary. Otherwise, you make an enemy. Your creative resources come to forefront. Member of opposite sex says I love you and means it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You're asked to carry heavier load of responsibility. If you publish, write or advertise, prestige could astound many people. Prestige is high—promotion, advancement could be very much in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasis on co-operation, understanding those who hold views opposite your own. Spotlight also on partnership, legal ties, marriage, career. Good hints for another time. Grasp overall view. Gains emotional, second wind. Wait. Listen and observe. Detr direct action.

IF MAY 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are introspective, sensitive, fond of reading, lecturing, drawn to spiritual curiosities. It is high desire. You are eager to learn, to analyze, to dissect ideas. You are often disillusioned because you seek perfection in places and people. August could be your outstanding month of 1977. A year which sees you realizing some of the goals of the last year. You individuals play important roles in your life.

Tax exemption, revaluation bills OKd

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature Tuesday authorized total tax exemptions for a host of farm and business property. LB158, handed final approval on a 30-10 vote, will increase exemptions on farm and business inventories and farm equipment from the current 62% to 100% over a three-year period. The proposal will boost replacement funding from state sales and income tax revenue from the currently scheduled $53 million to a $70 million ceiling by 1980-81.

Senators also gave final approval to a bill which Gov. J. James Exon had insisted he must receive before he would consider signing the personal property tax exemption measure into law.

That bill, LB181, provides penalties for counties which fail to revalue property as required by law and mandates public hearings before any local governmental unit is allowed to increase its budget by more than 7%.

The proposal cleared its final test on a 30-7 vote.

The governor indicated at a news conference last week that he would probably sign both bills into law if they reached his desk in their current form.

LB158, spearheaded by Sen. Loran Schnit of Bellwood, marched past one final obstacle before gaining enactment.

Sen. Dave Newell of Omaha mounted a last effort to kill the measure, but was voted down on a 12-26 tally.

Newell said the bill would relieve personal property taxes for a few at the expense of most Nebraskans who would provide replacement money for local government in the form of sales and income tax revenue.

The future effect of the bill will be to increase pressure on local real estate taxes, Newell predicted, because the proposal narrows the local tax base and fails to provide full replacement funding in the future.

"It's an absolute travesty of economic justice," he argued.

The bill provides total exemptions for farm machinery and inventories in 1978, total exemptions for business inventories in 1979 and total exemptions for livestock in 1980.

Under the terms of a 1972 bill, all those exemptions were scheduled to peak at 62½% this year.

State replacement funding would jump from $53 million to $58.6 million in 1978-79, to $62.2 million in 1979-80 and to a final ceiling of $70 million in 1980-81.

LB181, sponsored by Sen. Richard Lewis of Holbrook, would deny counties some of their personal property tax replacement funding if they fail to revalue land and improvements in their jurisdiction as required by law.

If a county did not revalue prior to Jan. 2, 1978, it would forfeit 10% of the replacement funding.

It failed to revalue prior to Jan. 2, 1979, the penalty would be 20%. Failure to revalue prior to Jan. 2, 1980 and each year thereafter would annually cost the county 50% of its replacement funding.

The purpose of the bill is to "achieve equalization between the several counties while not causing undue fluctuations in valuation and taxes."

A 7% budget increase limit was placed on each local governmental unit, but that ceiling could be exceeded by the governing body if it first held a public hearing on the budget hike.

Would love this kitchen. Lots of cabinets, plenty of working space, lots of room to store those delicious ingredients. The gourmet is doing something, the rest of the family can relax in an extra large fenced yard.
